A GIRL OF GRIT.

BY MAJOR ARTHUR GRIFFITHS.

COPYRIGHT, 1900, BY R. S. FENNELL & CO.

"I shall tell you nothing. I am captain of this ship."

"But will not be so very long, I think, after this voyage, if you adopt such a high handed and unwarrantable course as to accuse a passenger of theft, yet give him no reason for it."

This shot told. His fiery eyes faltered for a moment, and there was less assurance in his voice when he went on, "I am answerable to my employers, not to you."

"And, pardon me to the public, of whom I am one, and to the British government, whom I represent, Captain Sherborne."

His jaw fell, and he looked rather helplessly at the pursuer, who stooped over and whispered a few words in his ear. They only seemed to still further stir up his bile and more sturdily vindicate his authority.

"By heaven," he shouted, "I'll not be bounced by every longshore scallywag that chooses to face me out with thundering lies! On board my own ship too! British government be damned! What have I to do with it in midatlantic and with 50 fathoms of blue water under my keel? Besides, it's what you say. How are we to know it's true? You admitted you were sailing under false colors. What's your real name?"

That moment I had intended to tell him everything, but now I did not trust his discretion.

"You shall know all in good time when it suits me. Meanwhile I hold you responsible."

"Yah! You're worse than a sea lawyer, tacking and veering all round the compass. Answer my question. Did you steal those papers?"

"What papers? Whose?"

"The duke's, Terry Grada's, you know. You were seen near his state-room."

"That's untrue, for I never went there and don't know where it is. But as for the papers—Well, yes, I have them here—I touched my pocket—and I mean to keep them."

"The skipper all but bounded from his chair. 'I think you must be stark, staring mad; a raging lunatic, no less. I shall have to clap you in irons and send you down for safety to Sand alley. Hand them over now in a brass of shakes, or I'll—'

He rose menacingly. 'Keep your distance. Don't lay a finger on me or don't touch those papers. No one must see them. They belong to the British government.'

"Then how came they in the possession of this duke's? Yah! Try another."

"He acquired them wrongly and will have to answer for that and other things—be and those with him."

"Including that millionaire youth, I suppose, Captain Wood, who seems even more upset at this robbery—your robbery."

I could contain myself no longer. "He is not Captain Wood. He is an impostor. I am Captain Wood. Mr. McFaught's heir."

The skipper here burst into an uproarious fit of laughter, which the pursuer echoed heartily.

"By the everlasting Jim, this is too much! Quartermaster!" cried the captain.

"I am Captain Wood, Mr. McFaught's heir," and my friend ran in. "Call in a couple of hands with a rope's end and seize this chap down. It's not safe to let him range about the ship loose. But first of all hoist those papers out of him. They're in the inner pocket."

Before they could touch me I made one step to the open porthole and with a quick movement threw the parcel out into the sea.

"You desperate ruffian! I'll have the ship stopped, a boat lowered, run up to the bridge, quartermaster."

"They're heavy enough to sink, Captain Sherborne, long before you could get a boat out of the ship."

do what you like now. My mind's perfectly easy."

"I shall confront you with the boss who owns those papers."

"That he never did, nor will any one else now. But again I warn you to be careful. If you bring us face to face, there will be mischief done."

"No, for I shall have seized you first, made you so fast you won't be able to stir a finger or even look crooked, my fine fellow."

"The boot's on the other leg, captain. The mischief will be done to me, and I tell you whatever happens will be laid on you. I claim your protection. Withhold it at your peril."

The skipper looked nonplused. No doubt he was still inclined to think me a lunatic, but I spoke so quietly and collectedly that he was a little shaken in his first impression.

"Upon my soul I don't know what to say or do. What d'ye advise, Mr. Boffin?" This to the pursuer.

"He says he's Captain Wood. We have reason to believe he's not, not according to this—the pursuer touched a printed list of passengers lying on the table—or if he is the other most be an impostor. Ask him, sir, what proof he can give us that he is the real Simon Pure. Can he refer to any one on board who will bear out this monstrous assertion?"

"That's a good idea, Boffin. Come, my man, what do you say? Can you do it?"

"Easily if I choose. There are two ladies who would bear me out, but I would rather not bring them into it. I am engaged to be married to one of them."

The captain grinned. This was rather against me—a fresh proof of lunacy. "And a young fellow who is practically the proper authorities. Meanwhile I'll stand the racket. I must look to the name and credit of my ship."

"Where shall I be imprisoned?"

"In a spare cabin the pursuer will find you. You shall have your meals and all attention, but you'll stay below under lock and key until Uncle Sam sends on board to fetch you after we've alongside the wharf."

"I protest, and, as I have already said, will hold you responsible. You will be sorry!"

At this moment an urgent message came down to the captain from the bridge. The officer of the watch reported that the large steamer that had been overhauling the Chattahoochee for the last few hours was now within signaling distance.

"Signals she wants to speak us, sir," said the fourth officer, who brought the message. "Can't make out her number, but she's a new man-of-war cruiser, British, and Mr. Anton says she's steaming 23 knots an hour."

"She's after those papers, Captain Sherborne, unless I'm much mistaken."

I put in, with a little laugh of satisfaction. "Perhaps there will be some one on board who knows me."

The captain glared at me, but his eyes fell before my steady glance, and I could read his thoughts plainly; the growing doubts, the fear that he might be all in the wrong, the trouble that might come upon him if he misused me without clearer proof. Yet he carried it with a high hand to the last.

"I'll settle with you later, my fine fellow, and handsomely. You shan't bluff me."

"If I might suggest, Captain Sherborne, your place is on your bridge. I don't presume to teach you your duty, but a man is apt to forget it when he loses his temper and his self control. But I warn you against using any violence. I may have friends in that ship astern!"

I could see fresh rage gathering in his face at my words, but he restrained himself, and with no more than a parting oath and an order to cast me loose I went on deck without further let or hindrance and took my situation by the fore companion. I was much interested in what went on around. Every one was excited at the approach of this splendid warship. The rumor that she had some business with us had already strengthened by the many colored funtals, and my friend ran in. "Call in a couple of hands with a rope's end and seize this chap down. It's not safe to let him range about the ship loose. But first of all hoist those papers out of him. They're in the inner pocket."

Before they could touch me I made one step to the open porthole and with a quick movement threw the parcel out into the sea.

"You desperate ruffian! I'll have the ship stopped, a boat lowered, run up to the bridge, quartermaster."

"They're heavy enough to sink, Captain Sherborne, long before you could get a boat out of the ship."

Now the butcher of the Chattahoochee joined me where I stood, somewhat apart. He was an acquaintance through Roy, somewhat surly and uncommunicative, but I found him suddenly quite glib and friendly. He was an old man-of-war's man, and his spirit was stirred at the sight of the white ensign.

"It's grand, you. Grand to see that iron kettle, 13,000 tons displacement, riding triumphant like a wee birdie on the surface of the mighty waters. It means man's conquest of nature, science and knowledge and above all pluck. There's a sight, my man! The finest and newest cruiser afloat—H. M. S. Victrix!"

"You know her, then?"

"Aye, laddie. My own sister's third cousin is fourth engineer aboard, and I was all over her not a week syne when she lay in the Solent. She was under orders then for the China seas. Dell ha' me if I know what brings her into midatlantic."

"Some special order, I suppose?"

"War mayhap. These are fearsome times, laddie, and I read in the papers there was trouble brewing. What if she is sent to warn our shipping?"

"We shall soon know. See, she has lowered a boat, and we're going now under easy steam to take them on board."

The Victrix lay half a mile off, and her boat, looking like a cockleshell compared to her great bulk as it left her side, came bravely along, lifted over the long Atlantic swell by the well cadenced stroke of 18 oars. In the stern was a group of three, and as they got within range of my glasses I saw that one was a naval officer, no doubt in command of the boat, and two other persons in plain clothes.

When it Hurts To Cough

The cough that hurts, the cough that gets tight in the chest is due to getting deeper and deeper into the bronchial tubes and is making directly for the lungs, to become pneumonia, inflammation of the lungs or consumption.

Such coughs are sometimes referred to as "graveyard cough," because they usually bring their victim to that last resting place.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has long been known as mother's favorite remedy for croup, bronchitis, coughs and colds. It gains in popularity every day and now has by far the largest sale of any similar preparation.

It loosens the tightness in the chest, allays the inflammation, cures the cold and prevents pneumonia, consumption and other lung troubles. 25c. at all dealers, or Edmansson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

Many School Children are Pale, Weak and Nervous.

Depleted and Exhausted in Mind and Body—Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is Surprisingly Beneficial for Children.

The severe and ever-increasing strain of competitive examinations coming at a time when every boy and girl is undergoing trying physiological changes does much towards making mental and physical wrecks of school children. Run down in health, with the blood thin and watery and the nervous system exhausted, children have no chance to escape the many ills that beset a feeble body. There is no treatment known to science that so naturally and thoroughly restores strength and vitality to the nervous system as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It makes parents happy by bringing back the color to the faces and the strength and elasticity to the bodies of their pale, puny children.

Mrs. E. Dempsey, Albany, Ont., writes:—"My little granddaughter, nine years old, was pale and weak, she had no appetite and seemed to be gradually growing weaker. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food proved invaluable in her case, restoring health and color and making her strong and well."

Crutches Discarded

Mrs. Wells, of Mochelle, Annapolis, Annapolis Co., writes: May 8th, 1900

"I am an old woman, nearly eighty years of age. Sometime ago I fell and injured my hip. I was afterwards troubled with Sciatica; at times my sufferings were intense; I could not get about my room without the aid of a pair of crutches. I tried many remedies; none did me any good; some of them made me worse. At last I read of Egyptian Rheumatic Oil and tried that. I am happy to say that it has given me great relief, removing the pain and enabling me to move around much better than I could. I think Egyptian Rheumatic Oil a splendid liniment for use in cases of Rheumatism."
