The easiest way to remove ashes from a range is with an ash pan—the Pandora method (see illustration).

Such an extra-large ash pan is provided with the Pandora that it will contain more ashes than will accumulate in one day.

All the ashes are in the pan, too, because they are guided there by flanges attached to either end of the fire-pot.

Easiest, cleanest, quickest, is the Pandora way.

With the scraper and pan provided with every Pandora it's merely a matter of a minute or so to clean out the dirt in the Pandora flues.

Less dirt accumulates in Pandora flues than in ordinary flues, because they are wider and deeper, with no bolts, projections or crevices to catch the dirt, consequently you need not clean them out so often.

Saves a lot of labor, does the Pandora.

If your local dealer does not sell the Pandora write direct for Free Booklet.

Big Birds On Small Wings.
In the attempt to discover some universal law of bird flight scientists have disclosed concerning a number of species a most puzzling paradox, perhaps the most mysterious of the enigmas that the subject presents. It is that in a number of birds and insects the size of the wings decreases in proportion to the increase in size of the body of the flying creature. The Australian crane, for instance, weighs over 300 times more than the sparrow, but in proportion has only one-seventh the wing area of the smaller bird.

This curious fact is equally striking if we compare birds with insects. If the gnat were increased in size until it was as large as the Australian crane, and if the wings of the insect were enlarged to maintain the proportion they now bear to its body, they would be about one hundred and fifty times larger than the crane's.

It requires 3.53 square feet of wing area per pound to float the bank swallow, but to sustain the heavy vulture, a monstrous bird in comparison, requires only .43 of a square foot of wing surface a pound of body. The albatross, weighing 18 pounds, has a spread of wing 11 feet 6 inches, while the trimpetter swan, weighing 23 pounds, has a spread of wing of only 5 feet. The short wings of the crane, more than the pigeon, but in proportion has only half as much wing surface.

Pampered Dogs.
London veterinarians tell surprising stories about dogs. There was a poodle for which a prime leg of lamb was roasted every day; and there were other dogs which, when taken into the custody of the veterinary, were visited every day by their owners in carriages, whose footmen would get down from the box and hand in portwine, brandy and other delicacies on silver dishes for the sick dog.

Old Noble, Queen Victoria's favorite collie, was often taken as a patient by one veterinary and found to be suffering from overfeeding. It would frequently eat a whole roast pheasant, and the wonder is that it lived so long.

A veterinary once got a telegram from Oxford to go down instantly and treat a pet dog that had fallen downstairs and broken its leg. But the veterinary had to wire that the last train was gone, whereupon another message came: "Take special." And he did, at a cost of $160.

AN OCEAN BED TRAGEDY

DIVER'S FIGHT FOR LIFE BE-NEATH THE DEEP SEA.

Heroism Twenty-Five Fathoms Deep
—Struggles for Hours to Save His "Pal"—First Man Down Had Life Lines Entangled—Was Saving Sunken Torpedo Boat—Dangers of Submarine Work.

It is difficult to conceive a more dramatic story than that of the rescue of a diver off Torbay, after he had been imprisoned beneath 150 feet of water for five hours and a half.

Walter Trappell, a Government diver, descended in the English Channel outside Torbay from the deck of the gunboat Spanker in connection with the salvage operations of a sunken torpedo boat. He got entangled, and another diver, named Leverett, went to his rescue. In the process, simple language Leverett told of the events that followed on the ocean bed.

"We are," he said, "only supposed to remain about twenty minutes at a stretch in such deep water. Twenty-five fathoms. When Trappell said so long I thought there was something wrong, and I telephoned to him. He told me that he was fouled in the wreck and could not get clear. 'All right,' I replied, 'I will come down and help you.'

Almost a Hopeless Task.
"I descended immediately, and upon getting down found that Trappell was fixed in such a position that he was absolutely helpless. The wreck lies almost upright. Trappell was standing upon the sea bed, and his air pipe and life line were entangled in the deck gear of the torpedo boat high above his head. It was quite impossible for him to get up to his decks and clear himself.

"Slowly and laboriously I crept about the deck of the sunken boat, disentangling Trappell's life line and air pipe from the davits and other places where they were fouled. It took me three hours to get them clear, and I thought I should never be able to finish the job, as I was getting exhausted. Once, in fact, I gave it up and left him, but I pulled myself together again and went back to him.

Nearly Done For.
"I was getting nearly done myself. Blood poured from my nostrils and I was much exhausted, but I made an effort and stuck to the job until I got Trappell free. The work accomplished only just in time, for about three minutes before he was raised to the surface Trappell became unconscious.

Leverett was greatly distressed to hear of the fate of Trappell, when, amidst the first raised hopes of his recovery, Trappell, however, died suddenly in a hospital on the following Saturday night soon after his wife and daughter had left his side.

Leverett, the hero of this ocean bed tragedy, is a splendidly built, athletic young fellow who is known as a keen footballer. When arranging for the salvage of the torpedo boat the Admiralty asked for volunteer divers, as twenty-five fathoms, the depth in which the wreck lies, is much above the depth to which service divers are obliged to descend. Trappell and Leverett, the two senior shipwright divers in Portsmouth dockyard, volunteered for the dangerous task.

CITY OF PILGRIMAGES.

Canterbury the Scene of Many Stirring Historical Events.

Canterbury has once again been the scene of remarkable demonstrations, the pilgrimage of the Roman Catholic Guild of Our Lady of Ransom being attended by some 600 persons. There were processions through the streets and devotional services in the cathedral.

The Saxon Canterbury, or City of the Man of Kent, is one of the most interesting of English cities.

CANTERBURY CATHEDRAL.

interesting and most ancient of English cities. Some chroniclers would, in fact, make Canterbury more ancient than Rome itself. Among the most picturesque of the fragments of ancient times are large portions of the walls which originally encircled it. No other English city can show anything like the same number of ancient unaltered churches. They are met wherever way one turns.

And the cathedral itself embodies all that is picturesque. Huge are its dimensions—of many different ages and styles its architecture, yet it is perfect in its harmony and generally pleasing effect.

The crypt is the largest and loveliest in England. Here the remains of St. Thomas of Canterbury (Becket) lay from 1170 to 1220, and it was here that Henry II., fasting and disconsolate, with naked feet, bare head, and streaming eyes, performed the memorable penance on July 13, 1174. With his head partly thrust into one of the openings through which the actual coffin was visible, he knelt and received five strokes from every bishop and abbot present, and three strokes from each of the eighty monks.

Indigestion

Stomach trouble is but a symptom of, and not in itself a true disease. We think of Dyspepsia, Heartburn, and Indigestion as real diseases, yet they are symptoms only of a certain stomach nerve sickness—nothing else.

It was the first time that Dr. Shoop's Restorative was used. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, going direct to the stomach nerves, alone brought that success to the stomach. Dr. Shoop's Restorative, with its food and highly vital principle, not only restores the stomach, but also restores the blood and the system. Dr. Shoop's Restorative—Tablets or Liquid—and see for yourself what it can and will do. We sell and cheerfully recommend.

"ALL DEALERS"

Lord Milner's Views.
"It is extremely unfortunate that the one form of Imperial partnership, the basis of a practical kind, which all the colonies, including Canada, are as yet unanimous in desiring, should have met with no better reception in the Mother Country. 'Preferential trade relations' with our own fellow kinsmen, a position of permanent advantage to some of the greatest and most promising markets in the world, is a boon which—apart entirely from its political consequences, great as they must be—would be worth securing at any price, and which we should in fact have to pay in a battle."—Lord Milner, in The National Review.

The Knock-out Blow.

The blow which knocked out Corbett was a revelation to the prize fighters. From the earliest days of the ring the knock-out blow was aimed for the jaw, the temple or the jugular vein. Stomach punches were thrown in to worry and weary the fighter, but if a scientific man had told one of the old fighters that the most vulnerable spot was the region of the stomach, he would have laughed at him for an ignoramus. Dr. Pierce is bringing home to the public a parallel fact; that the stomach is the most vulnerable organ out of the prize ring as well as in it. We protect our heads, throats, feet and lungs, and the stomach is utterly indifferent to, and disdains, the blows of the prize ring. Make your stomach sound and strong by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and you protect yourself in your most vulnerable spot. Why the Golden Medical Discovery cures "weak stomach," indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, bad blood, and pure blood and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" has a specific curative effect upon all mucous surfaces and hence cures catarrh, no matter where located or what stage it may have reached. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to cleanse the passages with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy while using the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy. Why the Golden Medical Discovery cures catarrhal diseases, as of the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs will be plain to you if you will read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This booklet gives all the ingredients from which it will be seen that the medicine is not a drop of alcohol, pure, triple-refined glycerine being used as a base. Dr. Pierce's Great Thousand-page Illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 31 one-cent stamps, or cloth-bound for 50 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

Looseness of The Bowels.

It is very seldom during the summer months that most people are not troubled with "looseness of the bowels."

Sometimes it only goes that far, but generally it develops into Diarrhoea, Dysentery or Summer Complaint and has a tendency to weaken the whole system.

When the bowels get loosened up in this way and you wish to check the unnatural discharge without bringing on constipation, there is only one remedy to use, and that one is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. This remedy is not an experiment as it has been used in thousands of families during the past sixty-two years.

When you ask for Dr. Fowler's be sure you get it, as many unprincipled druggists will try to palm off a cheap substitute on you.

Miss M. Hopkins, Roseview, Sask., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and found it is all it is recommended to be for Diarrhoea and Summer Complaint. We would not be without a bottle of it in the house."

MARK TWAIN AS A BOWLER.

Bewildering Results He Achieved in His First Game.

More than forty years ago in San Francisco the office staff adjourned upon conclusion of its work at 2 o'clock in the morning to a great bowling establishment where there were twelve alleys. I was invited, rather perfunctorily and as a matter of etiquette—by which I mean that I was invited politely, but not urgently. But when I diffidently declined with thanks and explained that I knew nothing about the game those lively young fellows became at once eager and anxious and urgent to have my society. This flattered me, for I perceived no trap, and I innocently and gratefully accepted their invitation. I was given an alley all to myself. The boys explained the game to me, and they also explained to me that there would be an hour's play and that the player who scored the fewest ten strikes in the hour would have to provide oysters and beer for the combination. This disturbed me very seriously, since I promised me bankruptcy, and I was sorry that this detail had been overlooked in the beginning. But my pride would not allow me to back out now, so I stayed in and did what I could to look satisfied and glad I had come. It is not likely that I looked as contented as I wanted to, but the others looked glad enough to make up for it, for they were quite unable to hide their evil joy. They showed me how to stand and how to stoop and how to aim the ball and how to let fly, and then the game began.

The results were astonishing. In my ignorance I delivered the balls in apparently every way except the right one, but no matter—during half an hour I never started a ball down the alley that didn't score a ten strike every time at the other end. The others lost their grip early and their joy along with it. Now and then one of them got a ten strike, but the occurrence was so rare that it made no show alongside of my giant score. The boys surrendered at the end of the half hour and put on their coats and gathered around me in and courteous but sufficiently definite language expressed their opinion of an experience worn and seasoned expert who would stoop to lying and deception in order to rob kind and well meaning friends who had put their trust in him under the delusion that he was honest and honorable. I was not able to convince them that I had not lied, for now my character was gone, and they refused to attach any value to anything I said.

The proprietor of the place stood by for awhile saying nothing; then he came to my defense. He said: "It looks like a mystery, gentlemen, but it isn't a mystery after it's explained. That is a grooved alley; you've only to start a ball down it any way you please and the groove will do the rest; it will slam the ball against the northeast curve of the head pin every time, and nothing can save the ten from going down."

It was true. The boys made the experiment, and they found that there was no art that could send a ball down that alley and fail to score a ten strike with it. When I had told those boys that I knew nothing about that game I was speaking only the truth. But it was even truer all through my life—whenever I have diverged from custom and principle and uttered a truth the rule has been that the hearer hadn't strength of mind enough to believe it.—From Mark Twain's Autobiography in North American Review.

The Conductor Courteous.

St. John's, N. F.—Some of the natives call it "Senjens"—is far more picturesque than beautiful. But its quaintness reveals it from stupidity, and wander where you will, you meet with that courtesy and kindness that are the graces of people who live untroubled lives in remote places where strangers are a welcome break to their monotony. When you say to some casual benefactor that you are "much obliged" for some courteous direction, he will touch his hat and say, "Thank you," as if you had conferred the favor upon him. The street car conductor (they even have a trolley line, though how it can be run in winter is a mystery) will see that you are set down where you should leave the car and, if you are uncertain of your way, will get off his car and point your destination out, holding his other passengers until he is sure you understand. Travel Magazine.

Didn't Get It Just Right.

The subject of proximity was being discussed the other evening at a dinner party in Harlem. When one of the guests facetiously hinted that his host could tear it off a little when no women were present the hostess became indignant. "I would have you understand," she said, with crushing dignity, "that my husband never says anything before ladies that he wouldn't say anywhere." She is still wondering why it was that everybody laughed.—New York Tribune.

Yet It Was Realistic.
Miss Yern—Of course you've read that new love story of his. Crabbe (book reviewer)—Yes, I had to. Very realistic, wasn't it? Miss Yern—Non-sense! The dialogue between the lovers was positively silly. Crabbe—Well!

The Lack.

Knicker—There are plenty of books telling how to save life while waiting for the doctor. Bocker—Yes. What we need is one telling the young doctor how to save life while waiting for the patient.

A life in continual need is half death.—German Proverb.
