The United States government has started proceedings in Chicago against the Standard Oil Company in cases regarding rebates, and, if the charges are proven, will mean an aggregate fine against the oil octorus of forty million dollars. Judge Landis, before whom the last similar case of the Standard Oil Company was tried, and who imposed the twenty-nine million dollars fine, has refused to try the present case in his court. It will be tried before Judge Anderson of Indiana, known as the "Hoosier Terror," one of the most prominent "big stick" artists on the American bench.
