Household Matters.

Food For The Sick.

BY MISS E. R. SCOVILL,
Of the Massachusetts General Hospital.

Very savory beef tea suitable for convalescents may be made in the following manner. Take two ounces of butter, put it in a frying pan or spider over a clear fire; when it is melted throw in two small onions shredded finely, stir them until they are a nice brown. Have ready one pound of lean beef cut into pieces the size of dice, put it in the pan and let it brown also. Turn the contents of the spider into a saucepan, add one quart of cold water and let it simmer until reduced to a pint. Strain it before using.

The pure juice may be extracted from beef in two ways. First, by cutting the meat in small pieces, putting them in a tightly corked bottle, immersing it in hot water and boiling for several hours.

Second, by taking a thick piece of juicy steak, broiling it on a gridiron over a clear fire for a few moments, then cutting it in strips and pressing it in a lemon squeezer. The juice thus obtained may be given either cold or hot. It may be frozen, broken into lumps and given like cracked ice. A little salt should be added before using it. An invalid who is tired of hot beef tea will sometimes find it cold and refreshing.

Raw meat is very nutritious, and may be prepared by shredding the beef extremely fine, removing every particle of skin and fat, and mixing it with cracker crumbs. A little salt and pepper may be added, and the mixture rolled into tiny balls.

In convalescence after typhoid fever the greatest care is necessary with regard to the food, and no new article of diet should be given without the express permission of the doctor. Even so slight an imprudence as eating a raw apple has been known to cause death.

White roast, broiled and broiled chicken, mutton chop and beefsteak have long held a recognized position in the invalid's bill of fare, the merits of a real sweetbread have been sadly overlooked. When properly cooked it is a delicious dish, and may tempt a capricious appetite that has grown weary of other viands.

A sweetbread should be parboiled for a short time until quite soft, and then fried in a little butter to a delicate brown. It may be served with gravy or white sauce.

Delicious oatmeal gruel may be made by stirring a cupful of oatmeal into a bowl of water, allowing it to stand for a few moments until the coarsest particles have fallen to the bottom, pouring off the water, and repeating this once or twice.

The water must then be boiled, stirring it constantly until it is sufficiently cooked.

Barley water is made by boiling two ounces of pearl water, previously well washed, for twenty minutes in a pint and a half of water. It is then strained and flavored with lemon peel and sugar to taste.

This may be alternated with flaxseed tea. Steep half an ounce of unbruised flaxseed in a pint of boiling water. Let it stand in a covered jar near a fire for four or five hours, then strain and flavor.

Orangeade may be made in the same way as lemonade, using less sugar.—Christian Union.

Diphtheria.

The following communication appeared in a recent number of a New South Wales paper:
Sir—Seeing in your last issue a mention made of a correspondent writing from Blarney, stating that large numbers of children are being carried off with diphtheria in that district and Carcaro, a member of my family was attacked with diphtheria about four weeks since. As soon as the disease appeared it was treated with the best known remedies. The disease gained ground in spite of all efforts, and on the morning of the fourth day it seemed to be master of the situation. Both the child and the soft palate was completely covered with it. She could hardly hold up her head, very weak, eyes sunk back, in late termination. She asked for some honey. The first spoonful gave relief. I mixed honey, sulphur and borax, and applied it to the diseased part. The effect was wonderful. In two hours she was able to sit up in the bed, and took spoonfuls of honey at intervals. I applied the mixture every two hours. That night there was not a vestige of the disease to be seen—tonsils quite clean. The next day she was able to get up, and the third day able to resume her household duties. I was astonished at the rapidity of the cure.

It appears so simple that most people may doubt its efficacy, but I have the fullest confidence in it. Any one attacked with this disease wants strength kept up with plenty of beef-tea, brandy and egg, port wine, and stimulating remedies. Lemon-juice is a very good drink. Quinine is very good to keep down the fever. My publishing the above facts in your widely-circulated journal may be the means of saving many valuable lives.

JAMES FARRAR,
Charcoal Post Office, West Dapto.

Bottled Ginger Beer.

The Journal of Chemistry gives a safe and harmless and refreshing substitute for beverages that owe their stimulating properties to alcohol. It is made thus: Lump sugar, one pound; good, unbleached Jamaica ginger (well bruised), one ounce; cream of tartar, three-fourths of an ounce (or tartaric acid, one-half of an ounce); two or three lemons, sliced; boiling water, one gallon. Macerate with frequent stirring, in a covered vessel, until barely lukewarm, then add of yeast one and a half or two ounces (about two-thirds of a wine glassful), and keep it in a moderately warm place to excite a brisk fermentation; the next day rack or decant the liquor and strain it through a jelly-bag or flannel; allow it to work for another day or two, according to the weather; then skim it, again decant, or strain and put it in bottles, the necks of which should be "wired" down.

Chap Vinegar.

Take a quantity of common Irish potatoes, wash them until they are thoroughly clean, place them in a large vessel and boil them until done. Drain off carefully the water that they were cooked in, straining it, if necessary, in order to remove every particle of the potato. Then put this potato water in a jug or keg, which set near the stove, or in some place where it will be kept warm, and add one pound of sugar to about two gallons and a half of the water, some hop yeast, or a small portion of whisky. Let it stand three or four days, and it will have become a delicious vinegar, at a cost of six or seven cents per gallon.—Journal of Chemistry.

Remedy for Eczema.—There is scarcely any ache to which children are subject, so bad to bear and difficult to cure, as the eczema. But there is a remedy never known to fail. Take a bit of cotton batting, put upon it a pinch of black pepper, gather it up and tie it, dip in sweet oil, and insert into the ear. Put a flannel bandage over the head to keep it warm. It will give immediate relief.

Deferred Matter.

(Crowded out last week.)
Free Trade.

The Montreal Star, a professedly independent paper, but leaning to the Grit side, publishes the following, which we commend to the consideration of the opponents of the National Policy.

Our politicians follow English precedent too blindly, forgetting that the conditions surrounding both countries are diametrically different, and herein they show their ignorance as well as their lack of patriotism. John A. Macmillan was a free trader, so was Bright, so was Cobden, but if circumstances forced those great men to emigrate to Canada, the chances are they would have been sincere protectionists. If the whole world was civilized, had good governments, then universal free trade would be a splendid political creed. But the whole world, or even half of it, is not civilized, and hence a man may be a good patriot in one country and an advocate of free trade in another. Free trade is good for England and bad for Canada. England has all the appliances, machinery and capital for a workshop, so has the United States to a less degree. While Canada has not. When protection benefited England her statesmen admitted a man was protectionist, but now that she has the qualifications mentioned her statesmen are free traders. It comes to this in fact, shall we allow England, France and the United States to manufacture for us, allow our workmen to starve and emigrate, or shall we foster our industries and retain our population? In answering these questions we must give great credit to our contemporaries, the Gazette, much as we may differ from it in other respects. From the first that journal has been truly local to Canada, while the Herald has been inimical to its interests in a like ratio. Protection has made England what it is, and protection Canada's salvation. The only two really independent papers in Canada of any importance, the Montreal Post and the Toronto Telegram, have sided with the Mail and the Gazette; I this respect, and the wonder is that any journal not dependent for a living on parties should not side with the party in power. It is true the necessities as well as the luxuries of life are rendered dearer by protection, but then work is more plentiful and wages are higher. It would be a small consolation to the mechanic if he could get board for $3 a week when he could not obtain employment, or if he could get a wife and family to support at a salary of $3 a week when he could not obtain employment. It would be a small consolation to the mechanic if he could get board for $3 a week when he could not obtain employment, or if he could get a wife and family to support at a salary of $3 a week when he could not obtain employment.
