About Copper King Mattresses.

The frames are made of kiln dried white maple, and strong enough to withstand any strain. The fabrics are woven of the highest grade tinned mattress wire—reinforced with special copper woven bands—each mattress has three special cross wires running from side to side of the fabrics. This improvement distributes the load—an improvement found in no other mattress. We believe this is the best mattress on the market for comfort, costs less than many makes, and is always entirely satisfactory. Prices run from $2.75 up to $4.50.

In Society.

It Is The Correct Thing.

For a Catholic to refuse chicken salad and other meats at a party supper after twelve o'clock on Thursday night.

To refrain carefully from doing or saying anything that would wound the feelings or reputation of another.

To let one's good manners be the outcome of a good heart, and not merely a veneering of social form.

For an uninteresting girl to remember that men are not usually attracted by motives of philanthropy in going to a party, and that if she objects to being merely a looker on in Vienna she must make herself attractive.

For good-hearted gentlemen to pay some attention to "wall flowers," as a courtesy to their hostess.

For the rich to spend their money to give pleasure to their friends.

For a Catholic girl to be a model in society to all others.

IT IS NOT THE CORRECT THING.

To give up the greater part of one's time to social duties.

To reserve one's most winning manners for the rich and those in high places.

To forget in prosperity the friends in adversity.

To forget that old friends are generally the best.

To today to wealth, to be supercilious to poverty.

To be too familiar with equals.

To forget that an angel was once entertained unawares.

To be eccentric in regard to conforming to social usages.

To be ashamed of one's religion.

To introduce religious discussions in society.

To ignore the presence of a stranger or a "wall-flower" at a reception.

In making up an opera party to include only the reigning belles.

For a girl to introduce the stupid men to her friends and to keep the agreeable ones for herself.

To remember the faults and forget the virtues of one's friends.

To forget to be careful in forming acquaintances, more careful in selecting friends, and most careful in choosing confidants.

For a girl to have secrets and would not care to tell her mother or guardian.

For a girl's conduct, however harmless, to be such as would call out unpleasant comment.

To patronize only charitable affairs that are fashionable and leave the others to take care of themselves.

To make a charity entertainment the occasion of "envy, malice, and all uncharitableness."

To think more of one's own part than of the object to be attained.

For a girl to take all the pleasure and credit in a charitable entertainment, and shirk all the work.

—The Correct Thing for Catholics.

Who Owns the Churches in France.

In view of the coming obliteration of Catholicism from once Catholic France this question of ownership has to be answered. The victim is already down and the highwaymen are quarrelling for his clothes. The politicians say the State owns them; buildings, altars, vestments, chalices, and all. What is meant by the State? The people? Evidently not. The "Block" that rules in the Palais Bourbon dare not submit the matter to the people. In spite of their skill in manipulating election returns they fear to be ousted from power on that question, and so the measure of disestablishment is going to be "jammed" through before elections. Is it the Government? That sounds a little too much like the utterance of Louis XIV, "L'Etat, c'est moi," so they answer: The nation is the owner. The nation built all those cathedrals, churches, chapels, shrines, colleges, hospitals, etc. The nation did no such thing. Subsidies may have occasionally been granted just as here in America there are exemptions from taxes, in consideration of the good resulting from church organization; but as a matter of fact all the splendid religious edifices in France, as in every other country, were built by private individuals or corporations. Neither the general government nor the communes nor municipalities have anything to say to them. But it is urged the government took possession of them all in 1789. It did, but in 1801 admitted it had stolen them and gave part of them back, and for what it kept paid a pittance from the revenues to support the clergy. The so-called salaries did not since then to ecclesiastics are only an imperfect restitution. I take your fifty-thousand-dollar house and pay you fifty dollars a year out of it. But apart from that, what about the churches built since then? Montmartre for example, and Lourdes, and countless colleges, convents, asylums? What right has the Government to take them? Clearly it has none.

The Socialist members of the Government say that even if this property is taken there is no harm done, because the former owners are made joint proprietors of what is henceforth held to be common property. That is like making my next door neighbor joint owner in my house, and telling me not to complain. Other political wits argue that those ecclesiastical possessions were granted for times when the Church was a social institution. As that is no longer to be the case the property lapses to the State; an arrangement which is equivalent to telling a householder who is ejected, you once were an owner, but now that we have taken your house from you, you are no longer so and the property reverts to us. It is one of the coolest and most audacious robberies in history, and the attitude of the French people is not the most supine. The age is not only chivalry but of self-respect is gone.

In olden times the Arian emperor tried expropriation with St. Ambrose. The saint simply camped in his principal church and defied the government; and the government changed its tactics. Some one asks: Is there an Ambrose in France? Nous verrons.—The Messenger.

The Doctor's Prescription.

"I don't know what to do about my daughter Lucy," said a perplexed mother who had come to an outspoken but kindly old physician for advice. "She seems so listless, and does not seem to have any interest in life, and she's so irritable at times. I don't think she has exercise enough, and I want to know what you think about sending her to a gymnasium or to a dancing school. She is tired of her bicycle, and the lawn tennis season is past. What would you advise?"

"How old is she?" asked the doctor.

"Nearly nineteen."

"Can she cook?"

"Oh, no; she knows nothing about cooking."

"Can she sweep?"

"No; my maid does all the sweeping."

"Does she take care of her own room and make her own bed?"

"No, I do that. Her room is next to mine, and I've always attended to that."

"Does she have any part whatever in the household duties?"

"No, I cannot say that she has."

"No duties, no responsibilities, no sense of obligation, no part in the work to be done in every household?"

"Well, no."

"Then, madam," said the doctor frankly, "your daughter has no need of a gymnasium in which to expand her pent-up energies. I don't wonder that she is irritable and unhappy."

"What would you advise?" asked the mother, weakly.

"I would advise you to make her feel she has a part and a place in your home life; that its duties must be borne by all members of the family in common, and that she must do her part toward contributing to the general comfort of the home. A girl of her age with no home duties, no responsibilities or interest in her home needs more than a gymnasium or a dancing school to make her helpful and happy."

Items of Interest.

Most Rev. Dr. von Hornstein, Archbishop of Bucharest, who was a native of Switzerland and was born in 1840, died on June 3.

On June 13 United States Senator A. O. Bacon, of Georgia, was received in private audience by the Pope, who gave him his autographed photograph, with his benediction.

His Holiness Popp Pius X., has been pleased to confer on Very Rev. Father Ryan, P. P., Dolphin's Barn, Archdiocese of Dublin, the distinguished author of a very able work on the Gospels, the distinction of doctor of divinity.

News has reached Carlow, Ireland, where he was born eighty-three years ago, of the death of the Right Rev. Mgr. Paul, vicar general of the Diocese of Auckland, New Zealand. Deceased labored for close on half a century in the sacred ministry at the Antipodes.

Don Carlos and the Duchess of Madrid, who reside in Venice, have presented to the Sovereign Pontiff a magnificent chalice in Byzantine style, reproduced from that exquisite and famous chalice which is preserved in the Treasury of St. Mark at Venice. In the decoration of this chalice there are twenty-eight large rubies, sapphires and emeralds. In the elegant case in which the chalice is enclosed on a golden band is the inscription, to His Holiness from "his most loving and obedient children, Carlos and Maria Berta."

An interesting feature of the dedication of St. Anne's new church, Kingsclear, New Brunswick, was the presentation to Bishop Casey of an address from the Indians of the parish, printed in Malicite. It was mounted on birch bark, and decorated with the pipe of peace.

"Recently," says Church Progress, "there sailed from Vancouver, British Columbia, three Sisters of Charity, who have consecrated their lives to the four hundred lepers in the colony at Kumanotu, Japan. And yet even such heroic sacrifice in the service of God can not always still the venomous tongue of slander against these noble souls."

Governor Warfield of Maryland has made the 25th of March a State holiday in honor of the landing of the Catholic Pilgrim Fathers on that date in the year 1634, under the charter obtained by Cecilus Calvert, second Lord Baltimore, from King Charles I., and the immediate establishment of religious freedom as the basis of the new State. By a happy coincidence, Maryland Day is also the feast of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin.

"Not all the reverses of life can take away the delight of a good book," says the Providence Visitor, "nor is there a better way of 'making ourselves' once we have left school, and of acquiring education and refinement than by communing with the great minds who have written their thoughts for the good of those who live after them. A good book is the very best of friends. We may converse with it, and be sure that our confidence will never be betrayed. We may have it near us whenever we wish—a trait in which a book is unlike our other friends who have all to be sought for and handled with care if we wish to retain their friendship. And, besides, in the matter of books, we may choose our own companions, whereas, in everyday life, we are forced to make friends of those whom we meet, whether or not they have similar tastes and characteristics as ourselves. The man or woman, therefore, who desires to have good friends, who aims at more than mere mediocrity, who loves to live in the past as well as the present, and to converse with the great minds which have enlightened the world, will secure and keep ever at hand those dearest of all friends—good books."

Tadolini has just finished his model for the figure of Leo XIII., which is to be the most striking feature of the late Pontiff's tomb. It is to be placed in St. John Lateran's or the door leading from the church to the sacristy, and will thus form a pendant for the fine tomb of Innocent III., erected by Pope Leo at the other side of the sanctuary. The Pontiff is represented in full pontificals, with his right hand raised in the act of blessing, while with his left he raises himself from the sedia gestatoria. There are to be two other figures on the tomb—a female one, representing the Church, with the cross raised aloft in one hand and in the other a laurel branch which she lays on the sepulchral urn; the other that of a working-man pilgrim holding a rosary. The inscriptions are to be short and simple; in the centre, under the figure of the Pope: "To Leo XIII. the Cardinals created by him" (for the monument is being erected at the expense of the Sacred College); under the figure representing the Church: "The whole world lamented"; and under the pilgrim: "The peoples went in pilgrimage to him." It is not likely that the body of Leo XIII. will be transferred before next spring from St. Peter's to St. John's.
