Honored the Chief.

If Mr. E. L. Borden ever entertained any doubt of the loyalty of his parliamentary followers, it must have been dispelled by the splendid reception given at the banquet tendered him in Ottawa a few evenings ago by the Opposition in the Senate and House of Commons. The function was held in the parliamentary restaurant, there being over one hundred guests, the chief feature being an inspiring address by the Conservative chief, in which he spoke of the recent campaign and the hopes of the party in the future. Mr. F. D. Monk presided, and in proposing the health of Mr. Borden said the occasion was intended to make manifest to the people of Canada the decision which in the private councils of the party had been unanimously arrived at, that of continued and enthusiastic confidence in Mr. Borden as leader. Mr. Monk paid a tribute to Mr. Borden which brought every man in the room to his feet. He spoke of his eminent qualifications and calm judgment, and said the Conservative party had decided to follow his leadership loyally. Mr. Monk referred to the Quebec Conservative members, who were all here tonight. He asked his Ontario friends not to despair of old Quebec. Quebec did not despair of Ontario. Mr. Monk also referred to the solid united party at the back of Mr. Borden in Parliament. He was an esteemed, respected and worthy leader. When Mr. Borden arose he received a splendid ovation. He expressed his keen gratification for the kindness of his followers and the loyal support he had received during his eight years of leadership.

MR. BORDEN'S ADDRESS.
Political activities have never been especially attractive to me, and for reasons which I have already made known to you, it was my sincere desire after the recent election to be relieved of the duties and responsibilities of leadership. It would be idle, however, to deny that I have been deeply moved by the tokens of your generous confidence which have been so copiously abundant and whole-hearted since our failure to achieve the success which we had every reason to expect. I trust that in my future work and conduct I may so bear myself as to merit your continued loyal support. It is unnecessary to-night to refer at length to the causes which made the results in October last less favorable than we had anticipated. In some cases our candidates were inspired with too great confidence, and neglected necessary preparations and organization; in other cases candidates entered the field too late and lost by a small majority ridings which might easily have been won. Then it is well known that in the last ten days of the campaign the Liberal organization distributed among certain electors in numerous constituencies many thousand copies of a pamphlet which has been the subject of much discussion in the public press. This distribution was confined to certain elements of the population, and was accompanied by the utterly false representation that the pamphlet in question formed part of the Conservative campaign literature. I denounce the character of the distribution, and especially the statement that this pamphlet was a Conservative campaign document. I regret that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has not thought it beneath his dignity to repeat this mis-statement in the House of Commons. A more unworthy declaration never emanated from the lips of any public man. That pamphlet was not part of the Conservative campaign literature. It was not distributed by any Conservative organization or club. The Conservative party was not in any way privy to or assistant in its distribution. By the falsehoods to which I have alluded, and by appeals not of the loftiest character when emanating from one who poses as a harmonizer of racial prejudices, many constituencies were undoubtedly affected.

I do not minimize the efforts of a great corporation directed against the Conservative party with unsparring hostility during the latter part of the campaign. There was no occasion or provocation for the animus thus displayed. The Liberal-Conservative party desires no feud and seeks no alliance with any of the great railway corporations of the country. If, however, the management of any great railway company insists upon projecting its open and powerful antagonism into every political contest, the directors of that corporation and those who elect the directors as well should understand that the gage of battle thus thrown down may some day be taken up, and that those who have given the challenge will alone be responsible for what may ensue.

It must also be borne in mind that not a few persons strongly in sympathy with the Conservative party deliberately refrained from casting their votes and exercising their influence in favor of that party the recent elections, simply because they deemed it undesirable that the responsibilities of administration should be assumed at the present juncture. Coming into power at this time, we would have been saddled with an appalling excess of expenditures over revenues for the present fiscal year, we would have been obliged to assume responsibility for the consummation of policies which we believed to have been conceived in wisdom, we would have been on the defensive from the very commencement. In the very first year of our administration we would have been obliged to announce an increase of debt greater by many millions than was ever known in any one year in Canada.

This leads to the consideration of the present fiscal condition of the country. The credit and resources of Canada are too great for even this Government to destroy or dissipate in a measurable term of years; but if they had intended to accomplish that undesirable result their course could not have differed in any marked degree from that which they have pursued. Six years ago Mr. Fielding declared that about one-half of that year's surplus would provide for the construction of the National Transcontinental Railway. With as much truth he might state in his next budget speech that one-half of the present year's "surplus" will construct the Georgian Bay route, deepen all our national canals and equip all our national ports. The Government plighted its word through a portion of our northern territory which had not even been explored. We contended that before committing the country to so enormous an expenditure there should be exploration, investigation, surveys—in short a thorough and accurate estimate of the resources of that huge district and of its requirements in transportation. This was absolutely in accord with the government's first proposal, brought down in the shape of a very able order-in-council during the session of 1903, but departed from purely for the sake of a campaign cry. What is the position today? For the twelve months ending January 31st, 1899, the revenue of this country was $43,113,833. For the twelve months ending 31st January, 1909, it amounted to $82,622,348. You will observe there is an increase in revenue of nearly forty million dollars in ten years. Yet with this enormous superabundance of revenue, as compared with that of ten years ago, the Government during the past twelve months has plunged this country into debt to the tune of $48,721,413. What does that mean? It means an annual interest charge of nearly two million dollars upon the people of Canada forever. How long in this pace to continue. Ordinary prudence has been so far forgotten that the conditions are becoming alarming. Any thought of economy has long since been thrown to the winds. They have murdered economy who swore loyalty to it, but still they are hardened and unrepentant. Like the three famous witches invoked by the Thane of Glamour, the three demons, Extravagance, Polly and Corruption, swing jocosely hand in hand in widest dance around the Government gelding. And certain glowing predictions of six years ago may be fulfilled in the same grim semblance as that misleading prophecy, which, seeming to proclaim Macbeth's triumph, did but foretell his doom.

Under the party system of Government an Opposition has its opportunities and its duties. We believe that these have not been neglected in the past, and they will not be put aside in the future. During the past four years the Opposition has imposed its policies upon the Government of the day to a greater extent than ever before in Canada. No more than an illustration is necessary. Civil Service reform, more rigid inspection of immigration, abolition of the immigration bonus system, free rural mail delivery, re-organization of the Railway Commission as a public utilities Board, improvement of the laws to prevent electoral corruption, prohibition of the employment of members of Parliament by promoters—in all these were reforms the Government has adopted the policy of the Opposition in whole or in part.

Great work remains to be done. We are in the public life of Canada at a most interesting period of its development. The conservation of our natural resources, the development and improvement of our waterways, the preservation of our waterpowers and their development for the benefit of the people, and allied subjects of transportation, cold storage and the equipment of national ports, the thorough control of great public franchises, the wise solution of social and economic problems of vital significance which already confront us, these are subjects which must occupy the attention of the people of Canada, and especially those actively engaged in public life in the immediate future. In all these matters whether we shall be in power or in Opposition there will be a serious duty to perform, and a great opportunity of which to avail ourselves. And we shall do well to remember that no steps should be taken which might in any way impair our national credit or arouse apprehension among those to whom we must look in the future for capital to be employed in the development of this country. Not only must we consider the necessities of the state in respect of borrowing, but also the necessities of vast undertakings already existing or which must be engaged in without great delay for the advantage and benefit of the people. Not for purposes of Government alone but for those committed to private enterprise as well, Canada must be a borrower in the markets of the world for many years to come.

We have in our ranks men who can do splendid work in the public service. It is no discredit to the old members of this House, it is no discredit to the Conservative membership of former Parliaments; to say that the present Opposition musters a stronger and more effective force than at any time since 1898. Already our members have shown a capacity and energy, an industry and a determination which augur well for the future success of the party. The best representative men of Canada are required in our ranks at the present time. They came forward in great force in the recent contest, and at the next general election we anticipate equally splendid reinforcements.

I have spoken of the serious character of our duties, but we devote ourselves to these with the spirit embodied in the inspiring words of a great French publicist uttered a century ago:—"La vie n'est ni un plaisir ni une douleur, mais une affaire dont nous sommes chargés et qu'il faut conduire à terme, à notre honneur." Life is neither a pleasure nor a sorrow, but a serious matter which has been committed to our charge, and which we are bound to carry on and bring to a conclusion with honor to ourselves.

The other toast was that of "The New Members," Mr. Monk referring to the fact that never during his parliamentary experience had he seen such able and energetic recruits. He aroused much laughter by stating that the older members were somewhat afraid of these vigorous newcomers, but he was sure they would all work harmoniously together for the good of Canada and the great party to which they were proud to belong.

British Columbia was represented by Mr. Goodeve, of Kootenay; Alberta by Mr. Magrath, of Medicine Hat, the tallest man in the House, standing 6 feet 4 inches and weighing 330 pounds; Manitoba, by Mr. Haggart, the man who won Winnipeg back to the party; Ontario, by Mr. Stewart of Hamilton; Quebec, by Mr. Blondin, of Champlain and Mr. Doherty, of St. Ann's, and Nova Scotia by Mr. Crosby. These speeches were splendid efforts, breathing expressions of loyalty from the various constituencies to the party and its leader. The toast list was interspersed with songs, and the whole affair went off very successfully.

Many Women Suffer Untold Agony From Kidney Trouble.

Very often they think it is from so-called "female disease." There is less "female trouble" than they think.

Women suffer from backache, sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability and a dragging down feeling in the loins. So do men, and they do not have "female trouble." Why, then, blame all your ills to "female disease?" Most of the so-called "female disorders" are no more or less than "kidney disorders," and can be easily and quickly cured by Doan's Kidney Pills. Mrs. C. Dupuis, Bellevue Village, N.B., writes:—"I was unable to do my household work for two years on account of backache. I could not get up the stairs. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me permanently after doctors failed to even relieve the pain. I can highly recommend them to all sufferers from kidney trouble." Price 50c. per box or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.
