Our Baseball Column.

PLAGIARISED AND OTHERWISE.

"CODDING" THE PUBLIC.

It cost the Baseball League $500, as its proportion, to replace the grandstand at St. George's Field this season.

Naturally, therefore, this sadly depleted its earnings particularly as during the War period all receipts over and above expenses were devoted to the various Patriotic funds.

In order to make ends meet, a post-season game was arranged by the League between the Cubs and this year's champs—the Lions—for yesterday afternoon—both managers giving their assent.

The game was duly advertised in all the papers on Monday and Tuesday, and the usual publicity given it in all their columns.

The League's Treasurer, at the request of one of the managers, even went to the trouble—not to say inconvenience—of interviewing every member of this particular team to ensure their presence, and secured their promise to appear.

The clash was eagerly looked forward to by the fans, and they assembled in numbers at the time appointed on yesterday afternoon.

Imagine their surprise, therefore, to find the gates barred but the ticket man on his perch awaiting instructions as to whether or not he was to admit the crowd.

Enquiry from him elicited the fact that there were some doubts as to whether the game could be played as both teams were short of players.

Eventually the umpires arrived in their flippers, and later some of the League officials.

A hurried consultation was held, and it was decided to scramble two "nines" and the managers went forth among the bleachers to get substitutes to play the positions of Munn ss., Payne 1b., and Gowans of the Lions, and Canning 3b., O'Driscoll rf., and Duggan 2b. of the Cubs.

Smith, Gushue and Bill Duggan donned the uniform of the champs, and Keefe, Manning and Harvey Thomas donned that of the Cubs.

The League officials—not being able to present the line-ups as advertised—admitted the multitude of fans to the grounds without charge—much to the latter's surprise, and eventual disappointment when they found unfamiliar forms adorning the positions occupied by regular players.

Nevertheless, with that cheerfulness which has always been a characteristic of local fandom, they suppressed their annoyance and chagrin, and settled down to witness the scrap.

Pitcher Smith of the Wanderers was asked by the Lions to go in the box for them with Walter Callahan doing duty on first base. Hall was the slab-artist for the Cubs.

The game was progressing quite favorably up to the fourth inning when Jupiter Pluvius poured forth his vials of wrath, and the game was called with the score 3 to 2 in the Lions' favor.

Editor Baseball Column.

Will you be good enough to say through your column how you think Orr came to be selected to represent St. John's in the inter-town games.
There is quite a lot of speculation rife over the City third baseman, and some of the boys are wondering why he was selected at all.

According to the records he has only played one game this year, and beyond batting his eyelids at the fast ones, did nothing to warrant his selection as third baseman. As a matter of fact, his position in that game was shortstop, and the third base was occupied by Canning—a much better man.

The little B.I.S. fellow—O'Donnell—also played a brilliant game all through the year, and has batted with the best of them.

Kindly say, sir, who is Orr anyhow in the city score-book, and why he is holding down the City third bag?

Thanking you in anticipation of your kind offices, and hoping you will give the public the benefit of your experience in this matter, I remain, Yours very truly,

WILLIAM J. BRETT,
Wanderers' Baseball Club.

Of the selection made by the Inter-Town Committee (Messrs. Montgomerie and Messrs. Hartnett and Cheesman) of Orr for third base, we cannot offer any criticism, when it is a well-known fact that Canning refused to play on the St. John's team, and both Brett—the writer of the above—and O'Donnell are on the line-up.

Now let's look up the dope on Orr. In 1917 he pitched four games for the Cubs, winning three of them, and losing the other by a narrow margin. The Cubs admit it was he who taught them the "inside" baseball which resulted in their winning the championship last year. Surely our forgetfulness are not so good that we cannot remember how he used to pole out two and three baggers over the fence in right-field territory, and doubtless can do the same again.

True he was absent from the diamond last year and this (with the exception of one game) but it was quite difficult for him to play ball here when he was playing the bigger game "Over There" and as a result carries with him the honourable scars of battle.

Another thing, "figures never lie." Now let us just go back a few nights ago when he did play with the Cubs and lamp his work. The score-book shows that his infield hit on first time up failed to net him anything but advanced the preceding runner to third.

The next time at bat he hit to right-field territory, got called out on a very close decision, but succeeding in scoring the base-runner from second.

Was given a base on balls on his third attempt, stole second and third, drawing a throw there from first, and beating the ball home. Altogether, not a bad evening's work; you must admit, Bill!

We hold no brief for Orr, but think the selecting committee was justified in picking him, and feel confident in prophesying that his performance will cause no regrets.

We must admire (and we are sure Orr and the fans will, too) Brett's frankness in writing as he did, particularly when he himself has been selected for the "home-team." It shows his sincerity of purpose and his keen desire to have absolutely the strongest aggregation that can be produced to repel the invasion of the Grand Falls' horde.

(Special Wires to the "Telegram" from Grand Falls.)
"More speed than Slocum ever had!"
"This kid seems just as wise as Carey."
"Their showing makes our manager glad."
"Our boys'll make your batters bleary."
"Our batteries just as hard as nails!"
"Two of our catchers are the goods!"
"Those two recruits from Troy are whales!"
"More found two champions in the woods."

At midnight in my guarded tent, This correct "info" to you is sent.

recognition of every workman in Can-irrespective of their union affiliations, should have been requested to attend.
