Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

HOW MUCH WISER WE WOULD BE.

Is there a more fascinating indoor sport than discussing the way other people ought to spend their money and don't; or ought not to and do? Here's the sort of thing I mean! Some friends of ours have recently bought a house. It is a very pleasant house, it is the sort of house they have been dreaming about for years while they lived in the sort of house one does not dream about—unless one has nightmares. Unfortunately, the very high cost of houses at the present time has made it cost more than most young people put into their homes.

Wagging Tongues.

And so the tongues are wagging. All the young people in their set who have less expensive houses, or who have only rented houses, are saying what a mistake it was for these people to buy such an expensive house. They can't afford it, say the wagging tongues, the upkeep will be more than they expect, and so forth and so on. Unquestionably any envy they feel finds a comfortable outlet in these comments.

Incidentally, the house does not cost more than twice the man's annual income—which, according to the budget-makers, is the amount one should not exceed in investing in a house.

Another couple I know are constantly criticised for the amount they spend for travel. They are always going off on trips of one sort or another (but at home they live very simply indeed). And another family comes under fire because they expend so much of their income on their table.

One of The Spices of Life.

Now most of us cannot have all these things we would like—a beautiful home in a beautiful location, pretty clothes, a luxurious table, amusements, travel, the best of education for our children and many other things. The result is that we all have to choose which things we want most. And since each one places the emphasis a little differently, each can find in his neighbor's budget a topic of criticism, and the inevitable corollary of criticism—a sense of his own superior wisdom.

How uninteresting, when you come right down to it, life would be if it were not for these little diversions. Surely no one should grudge giving pleasure his way, since most of us receive it!

Notes and Comments.

Small electric fans are among the novel equipments for motor vehicles, especially in closed cars and in ambulances.

One reason why there is so much unemployment, says the Dalton (Georgia) Citizen, is because a lot of dollar-a-day men are hanging around waiting for some one to offer them $8 a day.

Since the advent of Prohibition more charges of men driving motor vehicles while in an intoxicated condition have come before the Traffic Court in New York than before the dry law went into effect.

Citizens of Zeta, Mo., while watching a freight train pass through the city counted 135 men on the train stealing rides. The travellers were hanging to all parts of the cars, riding the rods, clinging to ladders, even sitting boldly on top.

France is going to have the best crops that the country has had since the days before the war, including a bumper wheat crop. The dry, hot summer, too, has produced a superior vintage, likely to yield the best wine that France has produced for nearly 20 years.

Prof. Arthur de Jasowski and Ni Vavilov, Russian agricultural scientists who have arrived in New York on the S.S. Esthonia, had passports which attested to the difficulty experienced in getting out of Russia. The passports consisted of 312 separate papers containing more than 300 signatures. They were 45 days in procuring the visas.

road surfacing known is being laid on the great highway system now under construction. The cost of the work is from $35,000 to $55,000 per mile. The most popular surfacing is brick, laid on a concrete base, although water bound macadam, plain concrete and sheet asphalt have been used extensively.

The first thing to do when you have an injury is to apply Minard's famous Liniment. It is antiseptic, soothing, healing, and gives quick relief.

The New Governor-General.

(From the Toronto Star.)

Lord Byng of Vimy is heartily welcomed throughout Canada on his arrival as successor to the Duke of Devonshire in the office of Governor-General. It is understood that the new Governor-General was selected by His Majesty with the approval, not only of the British, but of the Canadian Government as well. In this country Lord Byng is highly thought of because of his achievements in the war, and scattered everywhere throughout the Dominion are men who fought under him in victorious campaigns. There is, therefore, something new and not quite measurable as to its effects in the coming of Lord Byng to Rideau Hall. He is not like the Duke of Connaught, born to adorn such an office, nor is he like Earl Grey and the Duke of Devonshire, seasoned in constitutional usage. But he is a man of ability and character who has made a success of whatever he has undertaken, and he has, in Canada, to an unusual degree the hearty approval of the country. There is not in the sky a cloud except one about the size of a man's hand. It is an excellent thing that the new Governor-General should be an old soldier high in the esteem of the Canadian forces that fought in the war. He may exert a useful influence, but it is not unlikely that among our returned men there may be many who will expect of him, and urge upon him, courses quite beyond his constitutional range. They may expect of him the impossible. His arrival does not mean a changed administration. He adds grace and symmetry to the form of a monarchical government which is ours. In all this Lord Byng is thoroughly versed, and the only risk to which he is exposed is that returned soldiers throughout the country may press upon him from all directions to take courses other than those favored by his constitutional and only advisers. It is for them to know that this cannot be done. But he can exert a potent good-will within limits.
