

MEXICAN REBELS CUT OFF AMERICANS AT CANANEA

Naco, Ariz., Sept. 10.—Mexican rebels today cut off all traffic and communication between here and Cananea, Sonora, Mexico, where about 500 American residents, shortly after a passenger train arrived here carrying 500 rifles and 150,000 rounds of ammunition sent by the United States Government from the arsenal at Fort Sam Houston, San Antonio, Texas, to arm the American residents in Cananea. The rebels cut the railway in an attempt to prevent the shipment of arms reaching the Americans at Cananea.

The passenger train that left here this morning for Cananea was delayed by rebels a few miles south of the international line, the engine stalled and the passengers had to wait about 1500 into the United States on a passenger coach down the grade from Naco to Cananea.

Rebel Chief de News. Care has been taken to conceal the identity of the shipment of arms, but news that the Americans of Cananea had received the rifles and cartridges and that the request had been granted among the rebel chiefs operating in this vicinity.

Not only are American lives believed to be in danger as a result of today's operations by the rebels, but the mines must close down for lack of fuel within four days, mining engineers state.

Cananea is one of the most extensive copper mining centers in the world and the Cananea Copper Company is the richest corporation of its kind in Mexico. The railway destroyed by rebels runs from points on the American border to Cananea and is a part of the Southern Pacific of Mexico system.

In Cananea are about 1500 American men and about 10 American women. About 100 of these are American cowboys from surrounding ranches who are in view of the rebels look seriously upon the federal troops in Cananea. There are no federal troops in Cananea, other than 80 left in the hospital when the federal army evacuated Camp a few days ago.

Tucson, Ariz., Sept. 10.—Emilio Campa and his forces of rebels took possession of a passenger train on the Sonora railway at Villavieja, between Cananea and Nogales, today.

The discovery of the capture was not made until an engine was sent out of Cananea to locate the long overdue train. So far as known no one was molested by the rebels, who merely desired to loot the express car.

While returning to Cananea the engine which had been sent out to locate the train on a curve between Mesa and Del Rio. A rail had been removed by the rebels. It is not known whether any one was killed or injured. Bridges near Villavieja were fired by Campa's band.

SAN LAZARO, HAVANA, IS A CURIOUS BURIAL PLACE

Behind the leper hospital in the San Lazaro district of the city of Havana there is an old cemetery. Few of the many visitors to that city know that there is such a place; still fewer even pass beneath its iron-covered portal. Thousands visit the Colon cemetery, with its massive gateway and its beautiful monuments; not one in a thousand sees that site of the dead which was established by Bishop Juan de Espada in 1805. For twenty years it has stood unused for burials.

In old Roman days, in the time of the funeral pyre, it was customary to burn the bodies of the dead and deposit them in the walls of special buildings or structures, which were supplied with the name of columbaria, for the reason that their appearance suggested a dove-cote. The general idea of the columbaria has been preserved and, though unusual, is far from unique.

The more modern system dispenses with the burning and deposits the dead in niches in the walls of buildings or structures, which were supplied with the name of columbaria, for the reason that their appearance suggested a dove-cote. The general idea of the columbaria has been preserved and, though unusual, is far from unique.

These were simple and deposited in niches in the walls of special buildings or structures, which were supplied with the name of columbaria, for the reason that their appearance suggested a dove-cote. The general idea of the columbaria has been preserved and, though unusual, is far from unique.

The opening of a strongly locked and heavily barred iron gateway gives passage into a high-walled enclosure of some three or four acres in extent. Neither monument nor standing tombstone breaks its flat and grassy area. A grass-grown pathway leads straight across the plot to the mortuary chapel upon the northern side. All around are the walls, four to five yards in height, showing four tiers of round-topped niches, some open and some closed and sealed. Midway the western wall a gateway opens into a second enclosure of similar area to the first, though of different arrangement. A brick paved walkway crosses from east to west, bisecting a series of interior walls which extends through its greater length.

There are six of these structures, alternately open and arching the pathway. Here, too, the surrounding walls and the interior structures show the four rows of niches. A little counting and a rough calculation gave the total number in both enclosures at about 12,000.

The ground immediately around the chapel in the outer yard, is largely occupied by the horizontal slabs which mark the resting-places of those who rank, wealth or influence has secured for them a special interment. Here lies the body of a bishop and there lies one whose coroneted coat of arms, carved in relief on the marble, indicates a strain of royal blood. Many of the stones are broken, all are weather-stained, bordered with untrimmed grass and weeds. For the graves of many who lie here there is no one to care. Of Spanish birth, their friends and kindred have returned to their homes across the sea. Many of the wall niches stand empty by reason of an established custom, prevalent in these countries, of renting burial space for a time only. At the expiration of that time the bones are removed to a large uncovered receptacle along the southern wall, where they constitute a ghastly heap seen only from the top of the wall.

Modern Beaneries a La Mode

The Head Chef of the Buncombe Beanery was Wroth, and He had a Right to Be, for that very Morning he had beheld the Stew Cook mingling with a crowd of Wise Guys whose Avocation in life was Trimming Suckers.

It was True that the Head Chef was some Sucker Skinner himself, but his Job depended upon the Skill with which he Disguised his Art so that the Patrons of the Beanery did not Get Wise that the very Joint had the Mellow Gung tied to a Post when it came to the gentle Art of working the Sucker.
