In addition to the three historical tales which Mr. Henty manages to write every year for his boy readers, his prodigiou capacity for work enables him occasionly to do something for grown people as well.

"The Lost Heir" is his latest effort in this direction, and it describes some very clever amateur detective work in connection with the search for an abducted child. In this good effect, introduces a decidedly novel

weapon in the ability of two young ladies,

one of whom was permanently and the other temporarily deaf, to understand even from quite a distance what any person was saying by merely watching the movement of the lips. Their possession of this unique power not being known to those acquainted with them it was often used with very startling

effect, and forms the basis of a clever plot.

Mr. Henty's didactic tendencies appear but little in this story, except in a slight diversion in which one of the leading characters spends some time among the native tribes of Africa, and there becomes acquainted with

A Story of Arthur Stringer and an Oxford Professor.

Canadians are very touchy on the subject of climate, as Rudyard Kipling discovered when he somewhat thought lessly dubbed the Dominion "Our Lady of the Snows." When Arthur Stringer, the young Canadian poet and author, first went to Oxford, he carried with him letters from Professor Goldwin Smith of Toronto to Professor York Powell, the distinguished historian of

The old Oxford don, like one or two other Englishmen, had very vague Ideas about Canada and somewhat surprised the young stranger by inquiring if he got along nicely on English roast mutton after living so long on frozen seal meat. The young poet gravely protested that he perhaps missed his whale blubber a little, but the next day cabled home, and in less than a week the finest basket of autumn peaches ever grown in Ontario, carefully packed in sawdust, was on its way to Oxford. A short time afterward the young author was again dining with the regius professor at Oxford, and that gentleman produced at the meal a fruit dish loaded with tremendous

"Most extraordinary," said the old professor, "but these peaches were sent to me today, and I'm blessed if I know who sent them. From the south of France, I suspect, so I saved a few of them for you, Stringer. They will be such a novelty, you know."

The Canadian very quietly took a steamship company's bill of lading from his pocket and handed it to the professor. The professor gazed at the bill, then at the fruit, then at the poet.

"I had some whale blubber, too, pro-fessor," said that young man, "but I simply had to eat that. These other things were grown on my uncle's farm in Kent county, Ont., you know. He has 200 bushels of them every year, and he sent me over a basket of little ones along with the whale blubber."-Saturday Evening Post.

SALARIES OF OUR PLAYERS.

The Pay of Actors Varies From $10

Franklin Fyles, writing of "The Theater and Its People" in The Ladies' Home Journal, touches interestingly upon the earnings of actors and corrects the oft repeated reports of the enormous earnings of players. "Salaries vary with circumstances," he says manager may find at $25 a week a player whose moderate talent exactfits a part of considerable importance. He may have to pay $150 if the role is singular and fit candidates scarce. If he wants celebrity in addition to ability, he may be willing to make the salary $500 a week. In that case he takes into account the public value of the name and makes a feature of it in his advertisements.

"Not more than ten actors in America, aside from the stars, receive as much as $250 a week, and not more than five actresses are paid this amount. In fact, $150 a week is exceptional, and $100 will engage an excellent hero or heroine, a fine comedian or a delineator of eccentric character. The wages run down to $75 for a sou brette, ingenue or old man, to $50 for an old woman, juvenile man or juvenile woman, and so along to utility chorus men and women at $12 or $18 a Those are the wages of thoroughly competent actors in companies Strange Freak of Fate. Says the Portland Oregonian: "It is the belief of some historians that the name 'Oregon' is Aragon in disguise, that it was given to this country by the early Spanish voyagers and that American explorers so interpreted the theory is at least plausible and indicates a strange freak of fate. The name Spain proudly brought to this distant coast returned to the West Indies 300 years later to destroy the power of Spain on the seas! Little thought De Fuca when he sighted this coast in 1592 that some day it would build a warship which, under the name of Aragon, or Oregon, would be foremost in the battle that marked the end

GEN. CLERY'S ALL-DAY BATTLE.

Warren Engaged All Day Sunday-Fight ing Difficult, But British Successful-Partial List of Casualties - Lyttleton's Reconnuissance - Official

War Office Bulletins Tell the Story of the Advance.

London, Jan. 22. — The Daily Telegraph has the following despatch dated Saturday from pearman's Camp: "Gen. Warren's forces have fought a deliberately planned and successful battle. This important engagement occurred to the west of Spion Kop, and practically resulted in our securing the rough table land which constitued the key of the Boer position. After a fierce cannonade had been directed against the enemy's lines for some time, the British troops assembled near an eminence known as Three Tree Hill, which forms the Centre of a semicircle of crests, crowned with the enemy's works, and some six miles long. Steadily and with great dash the British infantry went forward in the face of a heavy fusilade from Mauser riffes. "Our troops were disposed as fel-

Mauser rifles.

"Our troops were disposed as follows: Major-Gen. Woodgate's Brigade on the right, Major-Gen. Hart's Brigade in the centre and Major-Gen. Hildyard's brigade on the left.

"Soon after midday the battle on the hill became fierce, and from 3 in the afternoon until 6 the fire from both cannons and rifles was extremely heavy. Point after point of the enemy's position was seized by the British troops, and eventually the Boer right broke and was forced back toward Spion Kop.

boer right broke and was forced back toward Spion Kop.

"Our force is bivouacking upon the ground it captured so gallantly. During the action to-day the enemy brought into play new guns, one of which was a quick-firer. To-morrow ought to settle the matter. In to-day's fighting our losses were trifling but the Boers suffered heavily.

"While Gen. Warren was fighting his engagement, an effectual demonstration was proceeding at Potgieter's Drift, the enemy's positions near there being vigorously shelled by the British batteries."

HART ADVANCED FIRST. Under Heavy Fire From Three Direction They Gained Their Point.

London, Jan. 22.—The Times has the following, dated Sunday evening, from Spearman's Camp: "All yesterday and to-day Gen. Warren has been attacking the Boers. Their position is a long r'dge, four miles northwest of Trichard's Drift, ascending from the river. At dawn yesterday (Saturday) our runs occupied a kopje on the east of the range.

Hart's Brigade Advanced. "The cnemy's acferoes were chiefly stone sangers, extending forward and right along the spur, making the position semi-circular. At 11 o'clock Gen. Hart's brigade advanced on the left along a rocky, uneven spur into the semi-circle, under heavy fire from three directions. Taking advantage of all positile cover, the troops advanced to a point within 500 yards of the enemy's right wing, but they did not advance beyind the edge of the cover. There they remained until dark, and bivouncked.

In order that the artist might get the filled with water, which was kept at an even temperature by lamps placed

She herself never complained of this, but the result was that she contracted a severe cold, and her father, an auctioneer at Oxford, wrote to Millais, threatening him with an action of £50 damages for his carelessness.
