hola's Secret.

A Romance.

But he did not finish the sentence; some remnant of loyalty, some memfriend, some pity for her because she was motherless and desolate, prevented it. For what she could possibly want him he could not imagine. A half thought crossed his mind as to whether it might be money; but mawas wealthy, and Lola her only child. Still it would be almost a re lief to him if it were money. He would not do anything without telling Do-lores. He looked up with a great It seemed to him that all the perplexities of his life were returning. The red rose for him had always been surrounded with sharpest thorns. His first impulse was to tell her, his second not to let her know, if possible. It could bring her only sharpest pain and could do her no good. Her words returned to him that her name was a burden of sorrow, and her happiness too bright to last. A superstitious chill came over him as he looked at the letter. He would not tell Dolores what was in it. But she saw that he looked pale and agitated. You have bad news, Karl?" she said suddenly.

"No, my darling, indeed I have no news at all," he replied "Show me that letter you have in your hand?" she said.

The squire looked up in wonder at the change in his daughter's voice. Sir Karl was at a loss for a few moments. He knew that if he did show the letter to Dolores it would make her miserable; she would imagine all kinds of horrors, and perhaps their happiness would be destroyed. If he refused she e vexed, and think he was keeping a secret from her. He compromised the matter by thrusting the pony carriage. letter into the depths of his pocket, and saying to her that he would show it to her later on.

'Is it anything important" she "Oh, no," he answered-"only a little favor asked by a neighbor!'

Then her anxiety left her. It could only be a letter from one of the tenants who wanted something done. In some strange manner all the brightness was gone from the day. They went out for a long drive after reakfast; but Sir Karl's jests were w; he even forgot to smile. His one ught was, What did Lola want with him, and should he tell Dolores? He looked at the bright, sunny face, so radiant with happiness and love. How could he sadden it even for a moment? And yet he hated to keep a secret from her. The struggle between his desire to save her pain and his desire to be truthful to her made him wretched. What day of the month is it, Karl?"

asked Dolores, as they stood together in the library after luncheon.
"The 10th of June," he replied. "Well, I shall always remember the 10th of June,' she said half-laughingly, 'as the first day on which you seemed dull after our marriage.'

"I am not dull, surely," he cried. "That cannot be Dolores." You are; and a greater crime, Karl, you could not commit-in my opinion, at least, for I love to hear your laughmatter all What has been the day? Even papa has noticed it; he says that he fears you are not well." She went up to him, and her finger traced the lines on his face.

"I cannot tell. I think you will soon send them all away. Kiss the lines, Dolores, and they will vanish as if by magic.

She klased them with her sweet, fresh lips. How he longed with all his heart to fold her in his arms and tell her all his perplexities! How at that moment he hated Lola for coming between them! Never was man so sorely perplexed; and the loving wife the perplexity in his face.

"My beautiful wife!" he cried, "every day of my life I love you more

"Do you really, Karl? Ah, my dear, it is too bright, too beautiful to last!" He kissed her again and told her that they would never be less happy because they could never love each other less; and Dolores was satisfied, although still a little anxious.

Father and daughter talked about him later on just before dinner; and the Squire said that Karl was not well; that there was a look of distress about his face, which could come only from physical pain; but he laughed at Dolore's forebodings of trouble.

"All happy wives have those fears," he said. "There is nothing wrong; only Karl is not well."

They dined on that day at six, so the Squire might be driven home by daylight; and at dinner the young baronet's face was more clouded than He remembered that Lola had asked to see him at eight; he would barely have time to finish dinner and get so far as the white gate before that hour. He had decided that it would be better to see her. If he refused she would perhaps call upon him; and, though for his own sake, he did not care in the least, he could not bear that Dolores should be distressed. It was the first silent dinner eatat Scarsdale since their marriage. Both Dolores and the Squire were full of wonder.

"Are you going to drive me home, Karl?" asked the Squire, when the dessert was placed on the table.

The baronet flushed all over his handsome face-not a faint flush, but a hot, burning color, which deepened when he saw his wife and her father looking at him with wondering eyes. "Why, Karl," laughed Dolores, "you are blushing like a girl. And what a beautiful blush-I wish I could look like that.'

But the Squire's heart sunk within There was something wrong, he thought. Ah, surely, a time of sorrow and trouble had not begun for the

"I am so very sorry," said Sir Karl -I really cannot go. I have to see someone this evening on business, and I must keep my appointment." He detested the bare idea of it as he uttered the words. "Can I drive anywhere with you?" asked the Squire, his heart sinking more and more with the sense of coming evil.

This is the first time you have been unable to drive papa home," Dolores observed. "How strange. Shall I drive you, papa?"
"No, my darling, if you can spare

James, I will take him." "James can go with pleasure," said Sir Karl, with a look of relief-a look not unnoticed by the Squire. So it was arranged. The Squire, after bidding a loving good night to his daughter and her children, drove off ville boy. "I am not going straight home," he said. "I shall go around by Deeping." No warning came to them that this was their last meeting on earth, that a terrible cloud was hanging over the happy household, and that the sweet, bright look on the face of Dolores would be seen there never again. They stood together, Karl and Dolores, lit the dreaming what that night would bring forth, watching the carriage, and waving adieus to the Squire until he was out of sight. Then Lady Allanmore said gently to her husband:

"I hope papa is not disappointed. He likes you to drive him, Karl," "And it pleases me to do so," rejoined the baronet. "It is as great a disappointment to me as it is to him. But in summer or cups of hot coffee in winter. Hasty eating is the foe of health. Sooner or later it must result in indigestion or some other form of stomach disease.

For the cure of the diseases of the stomach and allied organs of digestion and nutrition, there is no medicine so effective as Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It always helps. It almost always cures.

Mrs. Mary E. Lwis, of Tanner, Gilmer Co., W. Va., writes: "I will always recommend Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' for they cured me when doctors and other medicines failed. For fifteen years I suffered untold misery. When I commenced taking Dr. Plerce's medicines, I had given up all hope of ever getting well. I could not lie down to sleep, and everything I ate would almost cramp me to death. Was very nervous and could hardly walk across the room. I only weighed minety pounds when I commenced taking these medicines six years ago; I now weigh one hundred and forty pounds, and am having better health than ever before. My friends all say they can hardly believe that I am the same person; after being sick so long, I have changed to be nobust and rosy chaeked. I have taken fifteen bottles of the 'Discovery' fifteen of the 'Prescription' and fifteen of the 'Pellets.'"

PHILLIPS AND REID

Two Figurers From South Africa Were Well Received at Windsor.

Windsor, Nov. 7.-Corp. Phillips and Pte. David Reid, two heroes of the South African war, arrived here yesterday afternoon. They were not expected, and consequently few were at the Grand Trunk depot when they arrived. A carriage was procured, and the boys were driven to their homes. Last evening there was a military demonstration, but on account of the wet night, the election in the United States, and the windup of the political campaign in Windsor, the crowd was less than on similar occasions. The soldiers took the street cars at Walkenville, where a reception was held in the music hall. Addresses were livered by prominent citizens of Walkerville and Windsor, and refreshments were served to invited guests. When the procession returned to Windsor the aldiers were entertained at the home of Pite. Reid on Assumption street.

Pte. Reid is enjoying good health, al-though he has passed through his share of fever and other diseases in Africa. He was with the troops at the battle of Paardeberg, and came through safe and sound. He continued with the regiment until some distance north of Bloemfontein, when he was taken ill with enteric fever and sent to a hospital. He was finally sent to a detail camp near Cape Town, and when volunteens were called for to form a guard for Boer prisoners to be sent to Ceylon, Reid and seventeen other Canadians agreed to go. They only reached Dur-ban, however, when they were relieved of their duties by the Gloucester regiment which was going to Ceylon to do garrison duty. They remained at Durban for some time, but were finally sent back to the Cape, and stayed there until the transport sailed for Canada.

Helena he was attacked with a nervous contraction of the legs and has grown steadily worse. He also had what was called "Veldt Sores" in Africa, and suffered very much from this form of disease.

The two soldiers speak very highly of the hospital service, and say that the soldiers were well cared for. The Idaho, on which they came home, had 250 Boer prisoners alboard, and they were landed at St. Helena. The boys were delayed for a short time on the voyage home by the wheel of the vessel becoming broken.

THE INCREASE IN SUICIDES

Common to the Whole Civilized World -The Causes.

The decay of religious sentimentwhich is to be observed in all those countries which are in the foremost rank as regards knowledge, and especially the growth of scientific knowledge-has perhaps conduced more to the spread of suicide than has any other single cause. That the decadence of orthodox belief is an important factor in the increase of seif-murder is demonstrated in great cities like Paris, Berlin and Vienna, where agnosticism is rampant, and the greatest number of suicides occur.

Dr. Ireland traces the greater portion of the causes of suicide to severe strain upon the nervous system, which may be the outcome of a multiplicity of causes. Among these causes may be mentioned the increased strain of modern life upon the nervous system. The following are the mean annual rates per 1,000,000 population of some of the European countries: Saxony, 1861-70, suicides, 281; 1871-80, suicides, 325; 1881-84, suicides, 370; 1885-88, suicides, 333. In Denmark during the same periods, 283, 266, 249, 259. In France, 129, 161, 189, 212. In Prussia, 127, 153, 198, 204. In Belgium, 61, 81, 107, 116. In Sweden, 80, 86, 90, 110. In England and Wales, 66, 70, 74, 78. In Norway, 82, 70, 68, 66. Italy, 27, 37, 37, 48. It will be observed that with the exception of Norway the suicide mortality rate has increased, and in most countries very considerably, within recent years. The diminution in Norway is attributed, says the Nineteenth Cen-Corp. G. R. S. Phillips is a Walker- tury Review, to the energetic attack which the Norwegian government has made on alcoholism. The same journal says that, in the case larly, emigration accounts to some extent for the low rate prevailing there. It is evident that emigration provides on outlet for a great deal of misery and constitutes a hopeful alternative to

The rate of suicide mortality in the United States is one in 35,000. Dr. D. R. Dewey finds that in the New England States since 1860 suicide has increased about 35 per cent. In Massachusetts it has increased in 30 years, 1860-90, from 70 to 90 to the million liv ing, and in Connecticut from 6T to 103 million. A steady increase of selfdestruction is common to the whole civilized world,-Medical Record.

TOO NERVOUS TO SLEEP

Many Pale, Weak Men and Women Find Themselves Daily Growing Weaker and Fast Approaching Nervous Collapse and Prostration - Their Only Hope Is In the Use of

In sleep and rest alone can nature repair the daily waste of the body and store up the energies required for the duties of the day following. If the nerves are weak and exhausted, and you lie awake, longing for morning to come, you know that you will arise tired and worn out, and one nearer to nervous collapse, nervous prostration or paralysis.

Sleeplessness, irritability, headache, neuralgia, loss of energy and ambition, confusion of the mental powers, and feelings of lassitude and despondency are among the indications of an exhausted nervous system. The first thought is to take some opiate to induce sleep, a grave error, indeed, against which many nervous and physical wreck could warn you. There is no rest, no restoration in or rather unconsciousness, produced by opiates, and the deadening effect on the nerves merely hastens paralysis or prestration.

The most natural and most thorough nerve restorative obtainable is that which is known as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food (pills). It gets right down to the foundation of disease, and by forming new, red corpuscles in the blood, and rekindling the vitality of the wasted nerve cells, gradually and perfectly restores new life and vigor to the weak and run-down system.

There is no guesswork, no experimenting, and no faith required when you use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food (pills). It is composed of the elements of nature, which go to form new nerve tissue, and can no more fail than can the laws of nature.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food (pills) is no miracle worker. Though many cures brought about by its use were truly miraculous, it was after the treatment was used regularly and persistently for many weeks or months, as the case required. You can be absolutely assured of a restored and revitalized nervous system if you use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food (pills) according to directions. The phenomenal growth in the sales of this great restorative are the strongest evidence of its wonderful merit. 50 cents a box, 6 boxes for $2 50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. Imitators do not dare to reproduce the portrait and signature of Dr. Chase, which are on every box of the genuine.
