Retirement and Appointment of Judges.

Our contemporary, the London Free Press, professes to be not at all well satisfied with the appointment of Hon. J. T. Garrow to the Ontario Superior have been appointed. No one can gain-Day Mr. Magee's qualifications for the bench; but it does not follow that betause our fellow townsman is a man of judicial mind and long experience at the bar, and a man who would adthing against the fitness of the gen-

Nor is our contemporary's treatment of the Minister of Justice altogether that which ought to be expected of a Says the Free Press:

a house-cleaning in the Ontario judiciary very soon, some county judges to be retired to make room for clamorous claimants, in and out of Parliament, who are growing more anxious to be settled with as the time passes."

Now, the Minster of Justice made no such declaration. He said nothing that could be construed into such a statement. The editor of our contemporary must have been thinking of the days when its friends had the appointment of the judiciary, when he penned this choice morsel, for Hon. Mr. Fitzpatrick official debates report:

"I do not think the question of an Increase in the salaries of the judges tion that came up the other day was with reference to the retirement of a certain number of county court judges who had reached a period of life when they were not in a position properly their office, and the suggestion was that these judges, after they had reached a certain term on the bench, say twenty or twenty-five years, and had attained the age of seventy or seventy-five, should be allowed to retire on full pay. That was the suggestion. We have not got beyond the stage of looking on it as a suggestion. I think a man who has served his country for twenty or twenty-five years some consideration for the services he has rendered.

"Hon. M. Haggart .- Does this apply only to the county court judges?" "The Minister of Justice .- Up to the say that a constitutional difficulty exists with regard to the High Court judges. It is extremely doubtful, in America Act, whether a high court are reached is to preclude recovery and judge can be interfered with in any way. The most we could expect to do would be to make some provision that after he has attained a certain age and done service during a certain period he might be allowed to retire on full pay."

Favorable Impressions.

The Bristol Times and Mirror recently Dublished "Impressions of a Bustolian." which have been reproduced in other English papers. This writer speaks very highly of Canadian workmen as sober and industrious, free and contented. Perhaps this statement might need a little qualification with regard to particular localities. "There are no trades unions restricting the earning powers of the workmen in Canada; it is all piece work." After a careful reading of the article, however, we can testify that its appreciation of Canaclan life is both intelligent and cordial. On one important point the writer remarks: "Education is free to all, right to be called "P.C.," or "People's and very excellent schools, superintended by fully qualified principals and is, too. teachers, are everywhere provided at the public expense; and, as far as I can see or learn, there is an entire absence of religious bigotry in the people, and also of angry snarling between the Episcopalian clergy and ministers of other denominations with regard to school teaching and school management, such as are too common in this country, and which is not only proving a hindrance to education itself, but is also fast causing religion to become a matter of ridicule with an increasingly long; and he asks this opportunity of large class of men and women. The writer quotes the statement of a head foreman: 'We have no St. Monday here, and unless prevented by illness or some other legitimate reasons, I have never known a workman not to be in his place on Monday morning. The men are free to take holidays whenever they are so disposed, and they invariably give themselves a good holiday once a year, generally taking their wives and families to the seatheir wives and families to the sea-nounce that the copy of 'Brewer's side. This being so, I was somewhat surprised to find Bible, if Mr. Kruger has quite finisheveryone so thoroughly English in instinct, habits and speech." This is interesting, especially as it seems to have been in our own neighborhood where not wish to defeat legitimate "imperial" aspirations is to go slowly. "Hasten slowly" is certainly the motto for this movement. In the Quebec Legislature, the other day, Dr. Pelletier, the member for Sherbrooke, discussing the question of tuberculosis, adduced very eminent authorities in proof of the fact that consumption is contagious, and that myself would not be in a position to 25 per cent of the adults are carried go further than to say that I do not off by the disease, and one-seventh of the total mortality of the universe was and reached an advanced age, should caused by tuberculosis. New York, March 25 .- John D. Rockefeller has been so transformed by his recent affliction, which has rendered him totally bald and robbed him of his mustache, eyebrows and eyelashes, that his friends barely recognize him. He has become as emaciated as an eastern famine sufferer and as white as the proverbial ghost. His head has become as bald as a billiard ball and the iron-gray mustache with which his friends have so long been familiar has disappeared. His eyebrows and eyelashes also have fallen out, and his face and head are as smooth as those of a baby. Smooth pearance but the Rockefeller that Wall street and the Standard Oil circles of millionaires knew.

We have several times pointed out

Rockefeller's latest affliction came on him suddenly. "Alopecia" it is called, and medical men differ as to the cause. Some ascribe it to the parasite said to cause baldness, others attribute it directly to the nervous trouble of the stomach from which he has been an acute sufferer for years. Dr. Julian P. Thomas, an expert on food and on skin diseases, says that in his opinion Rockefeller's total baldness is due to his stomach trouble. "He is being slowly starved to death," said Thomas. similate food and he is consequently being deprived of the nourishment necessary to health and vigor."

The reason for placing these articles on the free list is that their use will enable Canadian manufacturers to produce a better quality of goods. An order-in-council has also been passed providing for the payment of a

SENATOR COX'S GOOD REASONS

Why the Ross Government Should Be Upheld.

Incidents of Nomination Day at Peterboro—A Big Turnout—Hon. J. R. Stratton Heartily Indorsed.

Peterboro, March 24.-At the Peterboro convention on Saturday the Lib-erals and other supporters of the Ross Government in the west riding united in showing their regard for Hon. J. R. Stratton by unanimously renominating him as their cadidate for the legislathirty-one years, seven months and ture. The nomination was, of course, twenty-two days. Pope Adrian I. regarded as a certainty for Mr. Stratton, but the proceedings were formal ly carried out. A mass meeting of the electors in sympathy with the government was called, to be held in the opera house in the afternoon, and the turnout was most gratifying.

The large auditorium of the opera house was crowded when the meeting began, and there was an abundance of enthusiasm for Liberal doctrine and Liberal principles. The unanimity of the meeting in its choice imparted a cheerful tone to the proceedings soon after business began, and there were no dull moments. Mr. G. M. Roger, secretary of the West Peterboro Liberal Association, was in the chair.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED. The following resolutions were unanimously passed "That this mass meeting, convened to nominate a candidate in support of the Ross Government, declares its complete confidence in that government, and its hearty appreciation of the energetic and advanced administration of the affairs of this province, and of the broad and progressive policy whose vigorous application in the short space of time the government has held office has been attended with such beneficial effects that its future application will, we believe, lead to still greater results and bring about to a most important degree the development of our great resources in a way which will not only build up New Ontario, but reflect important benefits upon the province at large. And that this meeting takes this opportunity of expressing its very cordial appreciation of the excellent representation this riding has received at the hands of Hon. J. R. Stratton during five parliaments of this province, every want and interest of the riding having been looked after with a public spirited solicitude and effectiveness that have earned the warm gratitude of his constituents of every party, creed and condition, and leads to the hope that he will continue the services which his membership in the government will permit him to render, to the great advantage of West Peterboro, county and district, and the province

SYMPATHY WITH THE PREMIER "That this mass meeting desires to place upon record its most earnest sympathy and condolence with Hon. George W. Ross, premier of this pro-vince in the very great beravement he has sustained in the death of his wife, the partner of his life and helpmeet, whose fidelity to his person and posiand encouragement in the performance of the arduous duties incidental to the splendid services he has rendered this province and this country as its premeeting hopes that in partial mitigagation of his loss he may receive from valuable service to the state." MR. STRATTON NOMINATED. The chairman called for nominations, and Mr. Peter Hamilton, who had nominated Mr. Stratton in Liberal conventions ever since the later entered politics, again proposed the provincial secretary as the candidate of the convention. The mention of Mr. Stratton's name was greeted with loud cheers, and short speeches in support of the nomination were made by Messrs. William Crough, William Graham and Mark Spencely. Tributes to the fidelity and loyalty shown by the provincial secretary to his constituency were freely paid by all the speakers, and the prediction was made that he would carry the riding by a majority larger than ever before. The chairman asked for further nominations, but no other names were proposed. In a neat speech he tendered the unanimous nomination of the convention to Mr. Stratton.

THE REFERENDUM. Mr. Stratton dealt briefly with the prohibition referendum, declaring that the government was a unit in assuming full responsibility for the course it had pursued. They believed it to be the wish and desire of the people to express themselves on the subject. If more than 213,000 voters cast their ballots in favor of the measure of prohibition to be submitted on December 4 next, the government would take the full responsibility for its enforcement. (Applause.) They would not be justified in placing such a law on the statute book without having the support Mr. Stratton was in a happy mood of public opinion, and he believed it would be generally conceded that the course pursued by the government had been a wise one.

SPEECH BY SENATOR COX. The chairman called on Senator Cox to speak, and as the latter rose to respond the audience applauded loudly Mr. Cox said that he was somewhat cut of politics at present, as he had little time to devote to that subject; his attention was almost entirely given to business matters. He was very glad of the opportunity of meeting his old friends here again, and assured them that he was as earnest and anxious about the welfare of Peterboro as he was when he first came here 38 years ago. He was also glad to come down and speak in support of Mr. Stratton at his nominating convention. The people of Peterboro could have little idea of the great service the provincial secretary was rendering to his own constituents. He had been most active and alert in promoting the advancement of Peterboro, and a case in point was in connection with the cereal works lately located here. Mr. Cox said that Mr. Stratton had greatly aided the promoters of that enterprise by arranging for the ratification by the legislature of the agreement with the

"The Liberal Administration," said Mr. Pattullo, amid cheers, "stands today for all that is best in the public life of the country. We are not, however, content to live on past deeds. We want to have a future as well as a record. We have developed the older Ontario and now must turn our attention to New Ontario.
