

The Work of The Schools

Business at Yesterday Evening's Regular Meeting of the School Board.

General Attendance Increasing—A Flag Raising on the 23rd.

Little of importance was transacted at yesterday evening's regular meeting of the board of school trustees. Superintendent Eaton reported a most gratifying increase in the attendance at the public schools during April. It was decided to have a general flag raising on the afternoon of the 23rd at all the schools, when the new flags will be hung to the breeze.

There were present Trustees Dr. Lewis Hall in the chair, and Trustees Brown, Mrs. Gordon Grant, Drury, Belyea and McCandless.

Hon. J. H. Turner notified the board that Messrs. Turner, Beeton & Co. would be pleased to present a flag to one of the public schools. The offer was accepted with thanks.

Alex. Robinson, superintendent of education, asked for the use of South Park school for the teachers' examination.

The use of the same school was asked for Thursday, May 10, for an entertainment under the auspices of the Band of Mercy, to which the trustees were invited. Considerable discussion ensued before this matter was dealt with.

Trustee McCandless explained that he did not object if the children of the school were to be present.

Trustee Brown understood that the Band of Mercy (a school) organization, and thought therefore that the request should be granted.

Trustee Belyea thought it perfectly proper that the use of the school should be given for such a purpose, but not to outside societies.

Secretary Frank Eaton explained that this concert was organized by Mr. Kitto, of the S. P. C. A. He thought it proper that the board should be notified if the school has the right to go into the schools and organize concerts.

Trustee Belyea said the matter was settled last when such permission was not granted.

Trustee McCandless was decidedly opposed to anyone going into the public schools and selling tickets for any purpose.

The letter containing the invitation was received and read.

Miss Merritt, superintendent of the school for deaf mutes, extended an invitation to the board to inspect the school quarters in the A. O. U. Hall, which had now been in operation for some time. The invitation was accepted.

The secretary of the Vancouver school board asked that the board should consider the teachers' institute, for the purpose of defraying expenses of lectures to be delivered by Mr. McGilgan.

Trustee Belyea, while arguing that these lectures would be much appreciated, thought that as the institute was a government institution, he believed the time ripe, however, for the board to consider the question of arranging for the maintenance of a professional library for the teachers.

The letter was read and filed.

A. E. McPhillips, Q. C., addressed a communication to the board, in which he had given to the schools at any time the same might be worn out, and would continue to do so, unless it was necessary. Received with thanks.

E. A. Harris, on behalf of the "Messiah" concert company, thanked the board for the use of the school.

Chairman, who is establishing a bathing place, asked that the board contribute towards the cost of its construction. This was referred to the building and grounds committee.

Principal Tait reported that a number of the chairs in the mission school, Victoria West, were missing since the building was dedicated for its present use. Referred to the buildings and grounds committee.

J. H. Lawson asked for payment of the sum of $26, the cost of the fence and taxes on the lot adjoining the James Bay school, which lot is being used for school purposes. This was referred to the finance committee for report.

A brief report from the supply committee, recommending that repairs be made to a typewriter belonging to Miss McDonald, the assistant secretary, and a long debate, and the report was finally received and tabled.

The buildings and grounds committee reported that the basements at the South Park school were in an unsatisfactory condition, but action in the matter was deferred till the holidays.

That application be made to the department of education as a special holiday for the city schools.

Respectfully submitted, A. G. McANDLESS, School Management Committee.

On the question of the possible shortage of room at the High school, Trustee Belyea pointed out the importance of the attendance during April was the highest on record, as follows:

Table with 2 columns: Item, Amount. Number attending: 2422. Actual daily average: 2,050.71. Daily attendance: 210.50.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

After some further unimportant discussion, the board adjourned.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

After some further unimportant discussion, the board adjourned.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

After some further unimportant discussion, the board adjourned.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

After some further unimportant discussion, the board adjourned.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

After some further unimportant discussion, the board adjourned.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

After some further unimportant discussion, the board adjourned.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

After some further unimportant discussion, the board adjourned.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

After some further unimportant discussion, the board adjourned.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

After some further unimportant discussion, the board adjourned.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

After some further unimportant discussion, the board adjourned.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

After some further unimportant discussion, the board adjourned.

Trustee Brown's motion that the flag presented to the schools should be hoisted on the afternoon of the 23rd carried unanimously, and the donors of the flag will be requested to attend the ceremony.

man's family had been educated, well clothed and well fed from the earnings of the father.

Now, what about the Mongolian fellow workers of this man? They had no money in the country. They had not patronized the piano dealer or the furniture man, or the dry goods store. Every dollar, except the small amount spent on food, is sent off to China, to be used later on for the purchase of one or more heathen wives.

The white laborer sends his money in the province for the direct and indirect advantage of the province. He and his family remain in the province and constitute a most desirable class of residents.

The Mongolian lives here a short time, in fact an equal time that he makes as much money as possible out of the country. On his return to China he is an expert lesson and a missionary to his countrymen to come over here and "spoil" the "foreign devils."

It is surprising that the board and the principal parts of the opera were not a work that has in it elements of popularity as "La Mascotte" or the less pretentious "Olivette," but Rosenfeld and Andran in collaboration have nevertheless brought into its composition a very creditable array of charming melodies, ringing choruses and bright light, while the opera company that are progressive in their interpretation miss a few of the opportunities of the piece.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Success Crowned The Singers

The Bridal Trap Proves Delightfully Entertaining and Melodious.

Swing in Chorus and an Effective Use of Principal Vocal Talent.

With due and proper contempt for the pun suggesting itself, "The Bridal Trap" may be said to have brought immensely with it the audience that heard and witnessed it at the local theatre yesterday evening. To be sure, it is not a work that has in it elements of popularity as "La Mascotte" or the less pretentious "Olivette," but Rosenfeld and Andran in collaboration have nevertheless brought into its composition a very creditable array of charming melodies, ringing choruses and bright light, while the opera company that are progressive in their interpretation miss a few of the opportunities of the piece.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

There is not so very much that is distinctly original in the plot. Plots in opera as a rule are also as common as the modern interviewer. Primarily the complications hinge upon the ambitions of the heroine, who is the daughter of a nobleman, who is the nephew, who, with the perversity of youth, elects to do his love-making at first hand, and without the convenient aid of a lady's maid.

Incidentally the opera has been staged with commendable devotion to historical accuracy of costume and manners, and Mrs. Kent—upon whom the hard work of stage management as well as one of the principal parts devolves—has supplemented the original attractions of the opera with several introduced dances, and a few songs, possessed of both originality and grace.

chateau, the "confidential dependence for corroboration" upon Foutelard—each was well worked out. The Marquis was to be a most successful play.

The name of Herr Krupp has been so long identified with the cannon, which he is ready to sell to every nation in the world, with the exception of France, that few people are aware that most of the steel and iron found in German-built steamers also come from his works.

One of his largest and most attractive markets for these metals is the English machine factories. During the great strike of engineers in England a couple of years ago the "German Carnegie," as he has been called, strengthened his position in England to such an extent as to prove a most serious rival to the British producers. The United States Consul-general in Frankfurt, Mr. Gruenther, recently prepared for his government a report on the "Krupp Iron Works," and from it the following notes have been taken.

The total number of persons employed by Herr Krupp is at present 41,750, of whom 25,133 are at Essen; 3,458 in the Gruson Steel Works at Magdeburg; 2,726 in the German shipyards at Kiel, and 10,344 in the various smelters and cast-iron works owned by the firm.

The foundation for these gigantic works was laid in 1810 by the grandfather of the present count, Alfred Krupp, who was an inhabitant of the town now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

THE WORKS OF KRUPP.

They Give Employment to Over 40,000 People.

The name of Herr Krupp has been so long identified with the cannon, which he is ready to sell to every nation in the world, with the exception of France, that few people are aware that most of the steel and iron found in German-built steamers also come from his works.

One of his largest and most attractive markets for these metals is the English machine factories. During the great strike of engineers in England a couple of years ago the "German Carnegie," as he has been called, strengthened his position in England to such an extent as to prove a most serious rival to the British producers. The United States Consul-general in Frankfurt, Mr. Gruenther, recently prepared for his government a report on the "Krupp Iron Works," and from it the following notes have been taken.

The total number of persons employed by Herr Krupp is at present 41,750, of whom 25,133 are at Essen; 3,458 in the Gruson Steel Works at Magdeburg; 2,726 in the German shipyards at Kiel, and 10,344 in the various smelters and cast-iron works owned by the firm.

The foundation for these gigantic works was laid in 1810 by the grandfather of the present count, Alfred Krupp, who was an inhabitant of the town now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of iron-ore mines in Spain.

Essen had then 4,800 inhabitants, and now has 105,528. The firm owns a large number of