THE WOODBINE TROT.

The question what has become of the people ho used to go to games of baseball is almost as urgling as the question what song the Sirens and or what name Ulysses took when he hid Minnie Moore Does a Very Fast Mile-Yesterday. The big three days' trot of the Woodbine Driv elf among the women. The one thing himself among the women. The one thing that can be said of them with absolute certainty is that they no longer go to see baseball played. * * There are three or four games every day in New York and Brooklyn among professional players of the highest pretensions, ostensibly contending for national honors where there were at most two last year. It is safe to say that all these games put together do not draw as many specta-tors as were drawn in 1880 by the games of the New York League Club alone. The hobbledehoy no longer stands breathless over the ticker revolving the latest news from the grounds; neither does the small boy who is hunted from ing Club opens to-morrow and promises to or t strip any such event ever before held in Toronto. rgetic committee have concluded all ar-ents and everything should pass off in a so profitable a business in 1880. Already (that has very much cooled. If this season passes without an amalgamation of the rival organiza-tions the baseball public will virtually have dis-happeared altogether in 1801 and must again be prought into existence. The survivor of the two contestants will not inherit what the contest has dissipated, for it no slonger exists. The sooner the men of sense in the two organizations impress this view upon their associates the greater the chance that the base-ball public may be preserved in a condition to make one league profitable. If they do not suc-ceed in doing this, the chances are that the in-vestors will find their money sunk as completely as if they had thrown it into the sea, and that the players will be forced into some pursuit of which the emoluments are $2 a day or thereabout. may have them, but it is quite as 'milkely' as 'i cartainly us unreasonable that Mr. Haggin, th Dwyer Brothers or. Colonel Pulsifer should as range to match themselves for the benefit of an jockey club. All such invitations on the part of the latter will pass unheeded. So far as Kingsto is concerned he may have to take a season at th Springs, and Tenny and Salvator will meet on when a royal inducement is offered.
