A feature in the weaving of the Patagonian wallet is worthy of attention, although its description would be better in a paper on weaving. There is in the National Museum a game-bag from Mackenzie River, and another from Kodiak, made of exceedingly fine babbiche or buckskin cut into string. The weaving is effected by means of an endless chain of half-hitches, each loop caught into loop below. In Central America, everywhere, thousands of open net-work bags of all sizes are
