GALILEE.

The brilliant sun and star,
The mountain and the plain,
The lightning and the rain,
The forest and the field
God's children are,
And do obedience yield.

But the impetuous sea,
Tumultuous Galilee,
Like a turbulent child,
Hating to be controlled,
Its angry waters rolled
In boisterous waves and wild.

Christ came and spoke the word;
The rebel water heard,—
That awful glance beheld;
And then by fear impelled
Of the Almighty will,
The sullen water felt
The power of God, and knelt,
And trembling, was still.
