

of the relationship?

Have they begun on a good, sound footing?

And, finally, can it be expected that there will be telephone discussions between the two men from time to time?

The invitation was certainly given to do that, should the occasion arise. It was gratefully received. I cannot do better, I think, than assess the manner in which they did begin -- in the President's own words in his toast to the Prime Minister after dinner last night. You are familiar with that.

DR. BRZEZINSKI: I can just add, to that, a word or two.

I have seen President Carter and, also, earlier, Governor Carter in operation, and I can say that I have not often seen him relate, so well and so quickly to someone, as he did to Pierre Elliott Trudeau. The two men really got on extremely well, and the conversations between them were natural. They were easy. They were not at all formal. They really were very direct and, very clearly, there were very honest exchanges. You could just see the "chemistry" was working extremely well.

MR. HEAD: Mr. Brzezinski is speaking as an American, not as a Canadian, but I join with him on that!

(Laughter)

MEMBER OF THE PRESS: Mr. Head, what is Canada's attitude towards this Pipeline?
