

We plan to do further work on these findings in order to seek practical ways of contributing to the advancement of international law in the field of environmental protection in armed conflicts. In this way, we hope to promote a greater respect for the obligation that international law places on every state to avoid damaging the environment unnecessarily in time of war.