

truth that he leaves a void which cannot be easily filled up. His neighbours regret his demise exceedingly, for he was to them a constant prop and support, and they look forward with considerable apprehension to their own not remote decease, which will no doubt be greatly accelerated by his lamentable removal. He was interred with all the honours, and sleeps in the hopes of a glorious resurrection, his occupation being gone, and never to be resumed, even in a future world ; for who on earth could imagine what would be the functions in heaven of such a thing as—

A LAW-TOOTH?
