Mr. Speiser, interviewed today, stated his visit here was in connection with injunction suits which have been brought on behalf of the Loyal Orange Institute to restrain the bolting faction from interfering with or assuming the name of the Loyal Orange Institute of America. Injunctions, he said, have been obtained from Justices Greenbaum and Crane in New York and Brooklyn against bolting subordinate lodges and an injunction is to subordinate lodges and an injunction is to be obtained for the state lodge against what he terms bogus state lodges of the President Austin expressed gratification at the enthusiastic patriotism of the company's employes, over 140 of whom have enlisted for active service. Amid the rejoicing there was, however, the company's employes, over 140 of whom have enlisted for active service. Amid the rejoicing there was, however, the stern fact to be faced, that after a year of battles, the end of the war was not yet definitely in sight. While there was no reason for Britons, and especially Canadians, to be downhearted, the situation was still one which called for serious thought on the part of every man physically fit and free to enlist. The company was proud of the record already made by the employes, and would gladly give every encouragement to any others who may decide to go to the front. He regarded it as the utmost importance that the Canadian regiments should be equiped with machine guns to the fullest extent required by maximum efficiency, and said they had decided to contribute to the cost of one machine gun to be placed at the disposal of the Ottawa spille.
