With a Jury at Cayuga.

Cayuga, Ont., Nov. 17.—The trial of Mrs. Olive Adele Sternaman, for alleged poisoning of her husband in June, 1896, was begun at the Assizes here at 11 o'clock this morning, before Chart Justice Armour and a jury. B. B. Osler, Q. C., opened the case for the Crown in a lengthy speech, covering the Crown in a lengthy speech, covering the most important points to be brought.

Mrs. Sternaman sat during the after-Mrs. Sternaman sat during the afternoon with the same composure that she maintained all morning, often langthing at little jokes made by some of her lady friends near by, but during Dr. Harrison's evidence she had one hand up to her face, apparently silently weeping. She was dressed in black, and often her face would become pale and then brighten up to a healthy look and be not at all nervous.

The Malker * Evidence.

The Bother & Evidence. Mrs. Sternaman, mother of George
H. Sternaman, was the first witness sworn by the Crown. She said that her son had always had good health. The first visit she had to Buffalo was three weeks, after the death of Ezra Chipman, the first husband of the prisoner. After her son and Mrs. Chipman were married witness made her a friendly visit, on a joint invitation from the prisoner and deceased; had no talk at that time about suspicious death of Chipman.

The court, on resuming after lunch, called Dr. Park of Selkirk, who attended George H. Sternaman while he was in Rainham until his death. He found the patient partly paralyzed and had a foot and wrist droop, the right side being more affected than the left. He was totally helpless and unable to assist himself in any way. There was a numbness of the extremities. There was no rounting, and deceased said he had a good appetite. Both prisoner and Mrs. Sternaman seemed to be satisfied with the treatment of Dr. Saltsman of Buffalo. Witness also treated the deceased, but he suspected from the first that deceased's stekness was due to a arsenical poisoning. Only the day before he died did the patient vomit at all.

"What did you treat him for?"

"He was suffering from multiple neurities, brought on from arsenical poisoning."

"I am sure he was poisoned by ar-senic," replied the doctor.

Mr. German cross-questioned him at great length trying to show that the symptoms of Adison's disease and those of arsenical poisoning were similar. He identified the statement of Dr. Park as to the caue of death in connection with the Metropolitan Insurance Company. On being asked by Mr. Osler he said that Adison's disease is very rare in this country, and deceased told him that in the early part of his sickness he had red eyes and a very sore nose.
