the play of "The Little Minister"—those who have read it in its novel form, and those who have not. Thus arises a great question whether the novel or the play is the more attractive. It is undeniable that no work of fiction dealing with Scottism life possesses the charm of "The Little Minister." Whether it has been turned into direction of the play is a manner to suit a little direction of the play is the direction of In ad it not been turned directly futo play form it might have met with a loss of sustained interest; but it has been done, and J. M. Barrie, the novelist, is the one who made the play himself. Things have been so turned that there has not been the least suspension of interest from beginning to end. The drama opens in the modst of the story, in the scene where the wild Egyptian first appears before the startled min.s er and thwarts the rest of the striking weavers. Then, almost without intermission, one is carried along from the scenes of awakening love to the spot where the minister, fascinated by the witching charms of "Babble," forgets his parish and prayer meeting and follows in pursuit of her. It is hardly necessary to tell readers that "The Little Minister," both in novel form and as a play, is one of the successes of the century. Mr. Charles Frohman, who has given so many excellent plays and companies, has gone to a great deal of trouble and expense to select the proper people to portray the very difficult characters in this beautiful Scottish story. It will be seen at the Grand Opera House all next week, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

The Strain We

medicinal powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla. My wife has been a sufferer from catarrh for the past four years, and the disease had gone so far that the bones of the nose had become affected and particles had come away through an opening in the left side. Her eyesight was also affected to the extent that for nearly a year she was unable to read for more than five minutes at a time. She suffered Severe Pains in the Head and at times was almost distracted. She was treated by four different doctors, one of whom was a specialist. They all said they could not do anything for her, as the disease had gone too far. Her nose would swell about every three days until her eyes would almost be closed. Then it would break through and the swelling would subside for a day or two. About Christmas she commenced taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and since that time has steadily improved. She has not been troubled with any swelling since, and the sore on the side of the nose has all healed. She is on the road to a complete cure. I cannot speak too highly of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and I cheerfully recommend it to any person who is suffering with catarrh."

N. B. If you decide to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, do not be induced to buy any substitute. Be sure to get Hood's.
