The thrifty woman combines with a natural aptitude for economy the wisdom of selection and utilization. She knows when to save and when to spend. She knows what is necessary and what can be done without, and she makes the best use ot everything. Neither does she do all things herself. When help is at hand she utilizes it with discretion. thrift is utterly out of the question. The thrifty woman, too, not only exer-cises wisdom herself, but sees that her children do the same thing, not by in-dulging them, but by delegating to them sundry offices of which they are capable, by making them self-reliant. But the woman cannot do all these things by herself. She must enjoy the support, countenance and influence of her menkind. The greatest enemy to thrift is the promiscuous doing out of the money.
