Bullet Smashes Tire, Car Crashes and Three are Arrested

New York, Nev. 3.—One well-aimed shot, the quick wit of a Federal agent, and a deafening crash as a big automobile smashed into a building, ended a thrilling melodrama in Brooklyn, and preceded the arrest of three brothers, all charged with selling narcotics. For four blocks in Greenpoint, Federal agents in one machine chased a car in which were the three brothers and another agent, the latter a prisoner who had been, according to his story, threatened with death. One of the pursuers shot at a tire. The bullet hit its mark, and the first car swerved. At that moment, while the three brothers were fighting to re-gain control of their machine, the cap-tive agent grasped the wheel and sent the automobile crashing into a build-

SPEAKS OF GROWTH

The New Freeman Reviews Points in Catholic Life in St. John.

Catholic parish will be established at East St. John leads the New Freeman the growth of the Catholic Church in St. John. Catholic life in what is now St. John, it says, goes back to 1604, Subsequently, missions were established in different parts of New Brunswick.

During the French regime the faith spread, and when the country was ceded to England, in 1760, there were several missions. Súbsequent to the founding of St. John, the first mass was said in the old court house, which, at that time, stood on what is now Market Square, but in the year 1844, despite the restrictions then existing as to the church owning land, efforts were put under way towards erecting a chapel and then was started the first Catholic Church in St. John—St. Malachi's—which stood at what is now the corner of Leinster and Sydney streets, and was destroyed in the great fire of 1817, being replaced by St. Malachi's—which stood at what is now the corner of Leinster and Sydney streets, and was destroyed in the great fire of 1817, being replaced by St. Malachi's—which shood at what is now the corner of Leinster and Sydney streets, and was destroyed in the great fire of 1817, being replaced by St. Malachi's—which shood at what is now the corner of Leinster and Sydney streets, and was destroyed in the great fire of 1817, being replaced by St. Malachi's—which shood at what is now the corner of Leinster and Sydney streets, and was destroyed in the great fire of 1817, being replaced by St. Malachi's—which shood at what is now the corner of Leinster and Sydney streets, and was destroyed in the great fire of 1817, being replaced by St. Malachi's—which shood at what is now the corner of Leinster and Sydney streets, and was destroyed in the great fire of 1817, being replaced by St. Malachi's—which shood at what is now the corner of Leinster and Sydney streets, and was destroyed in the great fire of 1817, being replaced by St. Malachi's—which shood at what is now the corner is a barrister, is visiting his brother, the same with old friends.
