The Genoa conference has not been a failure. In confronting Europe and the world, he will be much more interested in the actual situation and the difficulties lying in the path of economic restoration it has performed a great and needed task. In bringing together the representatives of the powers, including Russia and Germany, to talk face to face and get each other's point of view, it has performed another accessary service. In making a truce for eight menths and arranging meanwhile for another conference at The Hague it has given assurance that the nations desire to compose their differences in a friendly way, if they can but arrive at a basis.

The renewal of the conference at The Hague gives rise to the hope that the United States may come to a better understanding of the need of American participation in discussions the outcome of which must vitally affect American interests in the future; for there can be no more isolation without a resulting penalty. If it were true that there are always selfish interests seeking advantage in the tests is desirable, but there must such conferences, there would be all the also be well-directed effort to get those more reason why the nations which re- who are of the desired type, and this on? their influence felt. drafted, and when passed by parliament would allow for the giving of vises in the various districts of Great Britain by representatives of the Dominion immigration department. These, he said, would obviate any possibility of a settler being sent back to the old country because of inabllity to pass immigration tests.

The monthly London journal, British Dominions Trade, makes some very pertinent observations on the subject of immigration. Asking the question: What is the matter with immigration? it designed the various districts of Great Britain by an assembly of women whose homes are in the various districts of Great Britain by an assembly of women whose homes are in the various districts of Great Britain by an assembly of women whose homes are in the various districts of Great Britain by an assembly of women whose homes are in the various districts of Great Britain by an assembly of women whose homes are in the various districts of Great Britain by an assembly of women whose homes are in the various districts of Great Britain by an assembly of women whose homes are in the various districts of Great Britain by an assembly of women whose homes are in the various districts of Great Britain by an assembly of women whose homes are in the country, who have fewer distractions of a social nature, and who could profit more by the knowledge gained. Doubtless there are to be found in many parts of the province individuals whose cottage craft would reveal new directions in which a general movement might be extended.

have to offer. He wished to have the opinion of the members of the council of the Board of Trade, how best to proceed in the matter, and stated the government was willing to carry out the desires of the committee of the board in connection with appointments.

I. C. Stewart, who has made a study of the matter and has published a number of splendid articles in the "Matiber of splendid articles in the "Maritime Merchant," was next called upon.

Mr. Stewart considered the matter one for the government to take up. The Boards of Trade throughout the country, while doing good work, were not in try, while doing good work, were not in possession of money required to do it adequately, and the whole question was one that needed the opinion and advice of those who are willing to study it and assist the government, where he considered the responsibility was laid. He advocated Mr. Armstrong as chairman of the commission, and that finally the work could be carried out under the direction of one of the departments of the government. "What do I do for 'em?" said Parker.

"What do everything for them—provide 'em with a home, plenty to eat, and so forth. What more can they expect?"

D. Macgillivray considered the question an important one and should be studied from all points. The hotel question throughout the province was one that needed careful study—some of the most beautiful points, especially attractive to tourist from inland, were without adequate accommodation and re-

1834-May 19-1922 Our 88th Birthday

In announcing the 88th Anniversary of the establishment of our business we take this opportunity of thanking our customers for the patronage accorded us in the years that are past. Our business has been built up by selling good hardware at moderate prices, but we realize that our success is but the reflection and the result of the good-will of our customers and friends, whom, we like to feel, in a broad sense are our partners.

We shall strive to continue to deserve your esteemed patronage with meritorious goods and courteous treatment.
