THE NEW BROOM AND THE NEWSPAPERS

Some Comment by Ottawa Paper And a Query to the Montreal Star

(Ottawa Free Press)

Under the heading of "The New Broom and the Newspapers," the Montreal Star makes some trenchant comments on the practice of inserting advertisements of government contracts in the party papers.

The Star advises the new government to use printed circulars in notifying the contractors of new works proposed. Other advertisements of a public nature, the Star has published, and states it will continue to publish, as matters of news.

To back up its editorial the Montreal paper quotes Sir Richard Cartwright's expression, famous in the old days of the Liberal opposition, about "padding the walls" of the paper. They do not try by means of printed circulars in notifying the contractors of new works proposed. Other advertisements of a public nature, the Star has published, and states it will continue to publish, as matters of news.

But there is another and a greater burden (or which the star says the people) imposed upon the people of this country by the newspapers or some of them. It is a burden against which the amounts paid for advertising government contracts is insignificant. And the largest newspapers of the big cities are the greatest offenders.

The post office department carries newspapers for 14 cent a pound. It charges on letter mail thirty-two cents a pound.

There are strict regulations under which papers are admitted to this 14 cent rate. The second class mail. The prime necessity is that the publication is a newspaper not an advertising sheet, and that it is sold for its news value to the subscribers.

It is in no sense a "free distribution" publication.

How many of the great daily papers have reduced the price of subscriptions in sections of the country to a point where they get from subscribers only enough to pay for practically the agent's commission, the postage and the mailing of the paper? They do not try by means of printed circulars in notifying the contractors of new works proposed. Other advertisements of a public nature, the Star has published, and states it will continue to publish, as matters of news.

So that for all practical purposes these papers have become "free distribution" papers. They fill the mail cars, they impose on the whole people the necessity of extra postal service.

What the Montreal Star thinks of these big city dailies who "laugh" at one-half or one-third the price they demand from the subscriber near at home?

Will it suggest to the new government the advisability of relieving the people of an expense in the public service which is unjustifiable except from the standpoint of the government of a few big newspapers in this country?

Here is another direction in which the "New broom," might make a sweep.
