Breakfast Cereals for every taste.

Whether you are one of those who eat a light breakfast or a full eal, some Breakfast Cereal will form at least a part of the meal. Now sixes differ very largely. Some prefer Shreded Wheat; others Majt reakfast Food, and still others Rolled Cats, and so on through the Breaffast food, and still others Rolled Cats, and so on through the list. Do you know that Cereals contain food elements absolutely essential to body-building? Do you know of an easier way in which these elements can be taken than in the form of a crisp, light Breaffast Cereal? We have such a selection as will please every taste, and the prices are low enough to suit every pocketbook. Buy by the dosen and you will make a good saving. Our Stock of Cereals is New, and consequently is crisp, which in these foods is most essential. Here are some of the-serious:

CHAPTER IV. OHAPTER IV.

Others whose sphere lies in the west of Loudon, Fleet street is little more than a name and Citiford's im a mere dead letter. Yet Citiford's im lies as safely stowed away in the shadow of the law courts as any grate under a country church wall. It as green of grass, as gray of stone, as irresponsive to the passing footisty.

Facing the railed in grass plot of its little court stool the house in which John Loder had his fooms. Taken at a first giance the house had the deserted air of an office, inhabited only in ef sir of an office, inhabited only in the early hours, but as night fell lights would be seen to show out, first on one floor, then on another—faint, human houses inconsciously signally seed floor, then on another-faint, human beacons unconsciously signaling each other. The rooms Loder inhabited were on the highest floor, and from their windows one might gaze philosophically on the treetops, forgetting the uneven pavement and the worn railing that beamed them around. In the landing outside the rooms his name appeared above his door, but the paint had been solied by time and the letters due to shadows, so that, takes in conjunction with the gaint had been still a part of the walls, the gaunt staircase and bare walls, the Inside, however, the effect was somewhat mitigated. The room on the right hand as one entered the small passage that served as hall was of fair size, though low celled. The paint of the wall paneling, like the name above the outer door, had long ago been worn to a dirty and nondescript hue, and the floor was innocent of carpet. Yet in the middle of the room stood a fine old Cromwell table, and on the plain deal bookshelves and along the mantel-piece were some valuable books—polit-ical and historical. There were no curtains on the windows and a common reading lamp with a green shade stood on a desk. It was the room of a man with few hobbies and no pleasures, who existed because he was alive and worked because he must. Three nights after the great fog John Loder sat by his desk in the light of the green shaded lamp. The remains of a very frugal supper stood on the center table, and in the grate a small and economical looking fire was burn-

Having written for close on tw hours, he pushed back his chair and stretched his cramped fingers. Then he yawned, rose and slowly walked he yawned, rose and slowly walked across the room. Reaching the mantel-plece he took a pipe from the pipe rack and some tobacco from the jar that stood behind the books. His face looked tired and a little worn, as is common with men who have worked long at an uncongenial task. Shredding the tobacco between his hands he slowly filled the pipe they lighted it. slowly filled the pipe, then lighted it from the fire with a spill of twisted

Almost at the moment that he applied the light the sound of steps mounting the uncarpeted stairs outside caught his attention and he raised his ead to listen.

Presently the steps halted and he beard a match struck. The stranger was evidently uncertain of his where-abouts. Then the steps moved forward again and paused.

An expression of surprise crossed Loder's face and he laid down his pipe. As the visitor knocked he walked quietly across the room and opened the

The passage outside was dark and the newcomer drew back before the light from the room. "Mr. Loder?" he began interrogatively. Then all at once he laughed in embarrassed apology. "Forgive me," he said. "The light rather dazzled me. I didn't realize who it was."

Loder recognized the voice as belonging to his acquaintance of the fog.

"Oh, it's you!" he said. "Won't you come in?" His voice was a little cold. This sudden resurrection left him sur prised, and not quite pleasantly sur-prised. He walked back to the fire place, followed by his guest. The guest seemed nervous and agi tated. "I must apologize for the hour of my visit," he said: "My-my time is not quite my own."

Loder waved his hand. "Whose time is his own?" he said. is his own?" he said.

Chilcote, encouraged by the remark, drew nearer to the fire. Until this moment he had refrained from looking directly at his host. Now, however, he raised his eyes, and, despite his preparation, he recoiled unavoidably before the extraordinary resemblance. Seen here in the cessnal supromylings of here, in the casual surroundings of a badly furnished and crudely lighted room, it was even more astounding than it had been in the mystery of the "Forgive me," he said again. "It is physical, purely physical, I am bowled over against my will."

Loder smiled. The slight contempt that Chilcote had first impred con-stain, and with it a second-feeling less Burnt his toes badly. But he will never again use a ches corn cure containing acids. was a wooden armchair by the fireplace. He indicated it with a wave of smoldering pipe.

Chilcote, watching him furtively, obeyed the gesture and sat down.

"It is extraordinary!" he said, as it unable to dismiss the subject. "It—it is quite extraordinary!" is quite extraordinary!"

The other glanced round. "Let's drop it." he said. "It's so confoundedly ob-vious." Then his tone changed. "Won't you smoke?" he asked. "Thanks." Chilcote began to fumble for his cigareties.

But his host forestalled him. Taking a box from the mantelpiece, he held it "My one extravagance?" he said iron ically. "My resources bind me to one; and I think I have made a wise selection. It is about the only vice we haven't to pay for six times over." He haven't to pay for six times over." He glanced sharply at the face so absurdly. Ilke his own, then, lighting a fresh spill, offered his guest a tight. Chilcote moistened his eighrette and leaned forward. In the flare of the paper his face looked set and anxious, but Loder saw that the lips did not twitch as they had done on the previous occasion that he had given him a light, and a look of comprehe

"You work till 2?"

"Two or 3." Chilcote's eyes wandered to the desk, "You write?" he asked.
The other nodded curtly. "Books?" Chilcote's tone was anx-

Loder laughed, and the bitter note showed in his voice.

"No; not books," he said, Chilcote leaned back in his chair and passed his hand across his face. The strong wave of satisfaction that the words woke in him was difficult to "What is your work?" Loder turned aside, "You must not ask that," he said shortly. "When a man has only one capacity, and the capacity has no outlet, he is apt to run to seed in a wrong direction. I culti-vate weeds, at abominable labor and a very small reward." He stood with his back to the fire, facing his visitor. His attitude was a curious blending of pride, defiance and despondency. Chilcote leaned forward again. "Why speak of yourself like that? You are a man of intelligence and education."

He spoke questioningly, anxiously.
"Intelligence and education!" Lodes laughed shortly. "London is cemented with intelligence. And education! What is education? The court dress necessary to presentation, the wig and gown necessary to the barrister. But do the wig and gown necessarily mean briefs or the court dress royal favor? Mucation is the accessory. It is influence that is essential. You should know that."

"Chilcote moved restlessly in his seat."
"You talk bitterly," he said.
The other looked up. "I think bitterly, which is worse. A change of fortune was not likely to alter my ways. As I have said, I was twenty-five." He smiled, "When I realized my position I sold all my belongings with the exception of a table and a few books-which I stored I put on a walking suit and let my beard grow. Then, with my entire cap-ital in my pocket, I left England with-out saying goodby to any one."

"For how long?" "Oh, for six years. I wandered half over Europe and through a good part of Asia in the time."

"Then? Oh, I shaved off the beard and came back to London!" He looked at Chilcote, partly contemptuous, partly amused at h-s curiosity. But Chilcote sat staring in silence. The domination of the other's person ality and the futility of his achieve nents baffled him.

Loder saw his bewilderment. "You wonder what the devil I came into the world for," he said. "I sometime wonder the same myself."

At his words a change passed over Chilcote. He half rose, then dropped ack into his seat.
