IN PARLIAMENT 30 YEARS.

Death of T. B. Potter, Founder of the Onee Panoos Cobden Club.

LONDON, Nov. 11.—T. B. Potter, the founder of the Cobden club, the once famous free trade organization, is dead.

Up to 1893, one of the most familiar figures in the English parliament was that of T. B. Potter. In that year, by reason of failing health, he declined further to serve as a legislator.

He may almost be said to have been the embodiment of the Cobden club, in whose interests he travelled far and wide, trying to bring into the fold every distinguished public man with whom he was brought into contact.

That P. E. ISLAND LAW.

At a meeting of the council of the Montreal Board of Trade on Wednesday, the secretary reported he had ascertained that the Bankers' Associ-tion had decided, as asked by the council, to take action towards endeavoring to procure the disallowance of the Prince Edward Island's legislation known as "The Evidence Act," whereunder creditors cannot collect in the course of their business in that province amounts of claims for goods sold, unless the traveller who sold them had a license to do so.

The council expressed satisfaction at the bankers' action, and ordered that the governor general in council be petitioned in behalf of the board to disallow that legislation.

WILLIAM AND AUGUSTA

Visit the Temple of Venus at Baalbek, Syria.

BAALBEK, Syria, Nov. 10.—Emperor William and Empress Augusta, Victoria left Damascus this evening, lunching at Palaka, and arrived home this evening. They were escorted by hundreds of Bedouins, who kept up a display of horsemanship and swordsmanship along the entire route.

Their majesties encamped in the ruins of the temple of Baal, and Emperor William unveiled a marble slab, bearing a commemorative inscription in Turkish and German, in a rent of the temple of Venus.

All the ruins are magnificently illuminated tonight. Tomorrow their majesties will start for Beirut, where they will embark for Austria.

DIED AT AN ADVANCED AGE.

Isaac B. S. Raymond, who died at Newton, N. C., on Thursday, had almost passed out of the memory of St. John people. He was in his 90th year. Yet Mr. Raymond was an active citizen here for a number of years, and worked with his brother, Charles E. Raymond, who in his day and generation was an enterprising builder. Some years ago he removed to Norton, where he had a farm. Mrs. Raymond died some years ago. Charles E. Raymond, brother of the deceased, who is still living in this city, will complete his ninety-first year in a few days.—Globe.

THE SAGAMORE

Listens to a Harangue Which the Reporter Delivers,

And Sets Out to Stem the Tide in the Usual Way.

"Mr. Paul," said the reporter, "I came up to give you a piece of my mind." "Kin you spare it?" tartly queried the sagamore. "Don't disturb my temper, sir," rejoined the reporter with some heat. "You are an old humbug. I have been watching you since you started in to give the Millicote nation economy and reform. I have been around among them and have asked them how they like it. They say they never saw such well dressed economy in their lives. They never saw reform topped up in such finery or wearing a travellled expression. So far as they can see, the only result of the great change is that you have got a palace car and other fixin's, and Jim Paul and some other favorites have got more pickin's. The ordinary every day redskin sees you whoop past in a palace car, and sees Jim Paul getting richer and richer. So far as the ordinary redskin can observe, the only use you make of him is to amuse yourself telling him fairy stories while Jim Paul picks his pocket. You were going to change everything. You were going to raise less taxes and make it cheaper for the Millicotes to live. You were to do more for the poor. You were to drink more champagne, patronize the Ballet Girl, go on excursions, and have a rare old time—while the poor Millicote gets nothing. You were going to fix up this reservation so that the Indians would be proud of it and proud of you. Instead of doing that you have got more palace cars, and I hear that you have even given the Micmacs a big contract, pretending that the Millicotes couldn't do the work. Of course every Indian who knows anything about a trail knows where that one leads. As I said a minute ago, you are an old humbug. You and your pets are bleeding these poor Indians to make piddings for yourselves. You ought to be stripped and thrown into a den of porcupines."

Mr. Paul listened gravely to the reporter's words, but did not manifest the slightest expression of feeling. "You made heap mistakes," he said. "You can't see what I done for them Indians. You see himbeby. Wait till you see us next year." "Next year," said the reporter, "if there should be an election on the reservation, I hope to see that you and Jim Paul are relegated to a remote portion of the Millicote soil ground, to forage with clam bait for an honest living."

"When you see that," quoth Mr. Paul, "you kin make up your mind it ain't no good to offer money for votes. Long's we kin buy votes we're here to stay."

"Every trading politician says that," said the reporter. "But these Indians are beginning to ask why they should accept the price of one axe-handle to help place a man in power, when, as soon as he gets there, he proceeds to gobble up for himself and his pets the price of enough axehandles to give every Indian on the reservation a new wigwam."

"If they begin to talk like that," cried Mr. Paul, "it's time I went round to see 'um."

And forthwith he ordered his palace car and went out to see that a new pavement of shining promises was laid in front of every wigwam door.

A VERDICT OF MANSLAUGHTER.

Conclusion of the Harold Frederic Case.

Terribly Severe Language of the Coroner.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—Henry Norman cables tonight to the Times as follows: As foreshadowed in your Sunday cable, the verdict of the coroner's jury on the death of Harold Frederic is one of great, indeed of sensational, severity. After some unimportant evidence and a brief adjournment, the coroner delivered an exhaustive summing-up. He said there could be no doubt that the cause of death was failure of the heart's action due to heart disease and rheumatic fever.

The evidence of all the medical men was to the effect that the death was undoubtedly accelerated by the want of medical treatment, and that if Mr. Frederic had continued under the care of doctors he would in all human probability have got over his illness.

As to his mental condition, all the evidence seemed to point to the fact that the deceased was a strong-minded, obstinate, self-opinionated man. As to his physical condition, his right side was paralyzed. He suffered from great bodily weakness, and was, therefore, entitled, in the eye of the law, to the same protection and care from those who had charge of him as a child would be. The evidence showed that, notwithstanding medical instructions to the contrary, Mr. Frederic was allowed to drink what he liked, to smoke, to lie all day in the garden and to take longer drives than he ought to have taken.

There was no direct evidence to show that Mr. Frederic was a believer in Christian Science, although he had on several occasions spoken in its favor. Mr. Mills was not much in the actual presence of the deceased, yet, according to the tenets of Christian Science, her treatment was supposed to be as successful in her absence as in her presence.

The jury could consider whether the evidence was sufficient to identify them in charging Mrs. Mills with manslaughter on the ground that she neglected the duty of a guardian in refraining from calling in medical aid.

Whatever might be said for or against Christian Science, no words of his could adequately convey to Mrs. Mills his utter abhorrence of her so-called treatment (chem)—and it was difficult to realize in those enlightened days of the nineteenth century that sensitive and intelligent people should lend themselves to such an absurd course of procedure. But the fact remained that a valuable intellectual life had been thrown away merely for the want of proper medical care. He had no doubt that both Mrs. Lyon and Mrs. Mills acted in what they believed to be the best interest of the deceased, but they could not excuse themselves on that ground.

The jury, after a brief consultation in private, returned a verdict of manslaughter against Mrs. Athalie Mills and Miss Kate Lyon. The following are the questions put by the coroner, with the answers of the jury:

"What was the cause of the death?" "Failure of the heart's action."

"Was death accelerated by the absence of medical treatment?" "Yes."

"What was the state of the deceased's mind, sane or otherwise?" "Insane at times."

"What was his physical condition?" "Physically incapable."

"Was he capable of taking care of himself?" "No."

"Was any person or persons criminally responsible for his death?" "Yes."

"Who?" "Mrs. Athalie Mills and Mrs. Mills."

The coroner, having read the questions and answers, said: "Then your verdict is one of manslaughter against Mrs. Athalie Mills and Mrs. Mills."

The foreman answered: "Yes."

The coroner offered bail. The coroner said the accused would be committed for trial. His inquisition would admit of bail with two sureties of £50 for each. Frank Harris, the editor of Saturday Review, and J. Scott Stokes, Mr. Frederic's literary assistant, became sureties for Mrs. Athalie Mills, and the Hon. W. Rowley, brother of Lord Langford, and Mr. Cunliffe for Mrs. Mills. They will be immediately brought before the local magistrates.

LONDON, Nov. 8.—Miss Kate Lyon, a member of the household of Harold Frederic, the late correspondent here of the New York Times, who died on Oct. 15 at Henley, and Mrs. Athalie Mills, the Christian Scientist who attended Mr. Frederic and against whom a verdict of manslaughter was returned by the coroner's jury yesterday, were arraigned in the police court at Henley today on this charge, and were remanded for a week. They were admitted to bail.

LIVERPOOL LUMBER MARKET.

(Parsons and Jardine's Circular, Nov. 1.) St. John spruce deals sold early in October at $8. lower port, $5 1/2 to $5, ex warehouse and board, $5 to $5 1/2 as to quality; Miramichi pine palings, 4 1/2 ft. and up, $1 1/2 to $1 1/4; 2 1/2 in average, 2 1/2 per cubic foot; St. John, 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 in, at $1 1/2 to $1 1/4; planks at $5 1/2 to $5 per standard.

Stocks of N. B. and N. S. spruce and pine deals on Nov. 1st at Liverpool, 20,000 standard, compared with 20,000 a year ago, and 7,500 two years ago.

The arrivals from the British North America during the past month have been 3,127 tons register, against 2,119 tons register during the corresponding month last year, and the aggregate tonnage to this date from all places during the years 1896, 1897 and 1898 has been 47,899, 60,404 and 67,640 tons, respectively.

The business during the past month has slightly improved, the deliveries have been more satisfactory, and values generally are firmer, with an upward tendency. Imports have been moderate, and stocks, with few exceptions, are not excessive.

New Brunswick and Nova Scotia spruce and pine deals—Of spruce, the arrivals during the past month have been again heavy, viz., 12,000 standards against 8,877 standards the corresponding month last year; the deliveries, however, have been large, and prices have slightly advanced, chiefly, however, owing to the short supply now on the way, as well as to the limited quantity of tonnage offering, the stock is still too heavy. Pine deals are most unsaleable, and the stock is too heavy.

Birch—Both logs and planks have come forward too freely. There is a fair enquiry, but prices are low, and the stocks of both are too heavy.

LOST A GOOD CITIZEN.

UPPER FIVE ISLANDS, N. S., Nov. 3.—Our community sustained a great loss on Tuesday of this week in the removal of Alister Bentley and family, who have departed for St. Martins, N. B., to live. Mr. Bentley was a prominent, active and enterprising citizen. He will be greatly missed as a citizen and as a Christian worker. By his removal the Presbyterian church loses a leading member, and efficient co-ordinator and Bible teacher, and an enthusiastic C. E. member and worker. The good wishes of the community accompany him and his family to their new home.
