INTRODUCES AN OLD FRIEND TO THE HOUSE

no effect and the reason was patent. The honorable gentleman was so used to being fooled by the late introduction of Public Works that they could not realize that assurances given regarding this project would be carried out. Considerable criticism had been indulged in by the honorable member from Victoria as well as the honorable member from Westmorland on the agricultural and immigration policies of the government. The honorable gentleman from Westmorland seemed in the latter part of his speech at least to have completely exhausted himself and in a peculiarly abrupt manner had dealt with these questions. He had said the words "Mr. Speaker," a great deal throughout the speech and in the last eighteen minutes he (Sprule) had kept count and learned that his honorable friend had only used the words "Mr. Speaker" eighty times. His honorable friend had astonished the House by saying that he did not believe in the policy to bring in immigrants who came here to improve their condition. In the name of heaven for what other purpose did they come? He (Sprule) had told the House that a New Brunswick farmer was worth half a dozen Englishmen, three Scotchmen and two Irishmen, working on a farm, but this country owed its present prosperity to the very class of immigrants whom his honorable friend had derided. These were immigrants of today, while we were descendants of immigrants of yesterday.

When his honorable friend made that sneering remark he spat on honored graves and defiled honored names and would not endeavor himself to the people of the province by his statements. His honorable friend had discussed the agricultural policy and had declared that this government had not as yet initiated any policy that had not been carried on under the old government. His honorable friend had told the House that a New Brunswick farmer was worth half a dozen Englishmen, three Scotchmen and two Irishmen, working on a farm, but this country owed its present prosperity to the very class of immigrants whom his honorable friend had derided. These were immigrants of today, while we were descendants of immigrants of yesterday.

there were only a few sections where wheat can be properly raised. In his own country the climatic conditions made successful growth of wheat practically impossible, and as a result the farmers had turned their attention to intense farming and were meeting with far greater success. In his outburst of approval of the wheat policy of the old government his honorable friend had declared that the Hon. Mr. Emmerson was the best premier New Brunswick had had. But he (Sprule) could not agree with that statement. He would admit that Hon. Mr. Emmerson was not the worst for that unique and undesirable title was claimed by Hon. Dr. Pugsley, no other premier had stooped so low in dishonesty and chicanery as his honorable friend had delighted to descend.

His hon. friend from Westmorland given the government some measure of praise over the appointment of the poultry expert and had assured the House that Mr. Jones was doing his work admirably. How did that statement strike the hon. leader of the opposition who last year had so vehemently denounced this appointment and made the famous statement that he knew of old women in Westmorland county who were more about chicken raising than Seth Jones. He might also inquire if the difference of opinion between his hon. friends on the merits of the poultry expert were the only differences between them.

His hon. friend had said that care should be taken in the introduction of foreigners into the province, but it was not made clear whether English, Irish or Scotch immigrants should come under this class. So far as foreigners were concerned, there was a Danish settlement in Victoria county where immigrants had met with excellent success.

Hon. hon. friend had paid a tribute to the ability of the native New Brunswick farmer as a farmer and while he had no desire to detract from that statement in the slightest degree, it must be a matter of common knowledge that some New Brunswickers were very poor farmers and were of no advantage to the province.

Not the slightest aid had been given by the Liberal government when it was in power at Ottawa to the advancement of immigration to the Maritime Provinces. But the Maritime Provinces had contributed their share to the upbuilding of the western provinces which to a considerable extent had been peopled by Dutchborders and Galicians, a class of immigrants which his hon. friend had objected to. Perhaps his hon. friend had been confused as to who might be termed foreigners. It was very bad taste for his hon. friend to make such uncalculated reference to the immigrants, particularly to the hardy sons of the fatherland and who had done so much to develop our fair Dominion.

Mr. Leger (West) followed and then Mr. Sheridan (Kent).
