

and permitted me to observe them very closely. It was probably the mating season. I had never before seen such great quantities of the insects, and they were still numerous when I left Windsor at the end of September.