Ireland.

Dublin, Dec. 19.—At Loughrea a number of laborers paraded, demanding work or food, and declaring they were starving. They surrounded the residence of Bishop Dugan, who distributed money. There is great distress in the town.

Dublin, Dec. 18.—Biggar, member of Parliament, at the inauguration of the National club at Waterford to-day, de-nounced the Lord-Lieut. as a blood-thirsty English peer who hanged Hynes and Myles Joyce, although satisfied of their whigs. Biggar was loudly cheered.

Despite the prohibition of the Government 3,000 members of the Laud League assembled at Loughrea on Monday. They adopted resolutions in support of the League and condemnatory of Gladstone's policy.

A system of public works enterprises would be far more creditable to English statesmen than forcing thousands into workhouses and then forcing them to quit the country, but if, during the winter and Spring, families quit Ireland they go to swell the ranks of the new Ireland which is growing beyond the Atlantic, where they will be trained in republican ideas. From his knowledge of the new Ireland in America he could tell Lord Derby and other English statesmen that before long they would have to take into account the Irish element in America in the settlement of the Irish question.

"Have patience with me!" I cried to the jailer. "Last night I lost my medal, and I cannot go without it."

"Medal! What kind of a medal?" he answered, impatiently.

"My medal of the Blessed Virgin," I said, tossing about the straw on which I had slept.

London, Dec. 22.—Mr. Parnell's speech in Cork is held by the English press to prove an intention to urge strongly the amendment of Mr. Gladstone's Land Act. The Times and the Conservative journals generally urge the refusal of all further concession. The Daily News recommends that the views of Mr. Parnell be fairly that the views of Mr. Parnell be fairly and throw me out forcibly. But I was that the views of Mr. Parnell be fairly met in a spirit of conciliation. The Echo is more emphatic, and declares the speech to be able, temperate and statesmanlike. The Gazette continues by saying:—"The tone of the speech is as grave and frigid as if the speaker had been trained in an office at Whitehall." The Dublin Freeman's Journal says the speech was the least rhetorical and most practical that the hardest-headed New Englander could deliver. The speech has already produced two important consequences. The French Government, it is learned, has ordered the arrest to maintain silence regarding Government, it is learned, has ordered the press to maintain silence regarding the relations of Russia, Austria and Germany. The Paris journals are becoming less hostile to England, and now advocate a fresh French, English and Italian alliance. The slightest move upon the European chessboard, particularly on the part of Italy, is anxiously watched.

London, Dec. 25.—Davitt, in a speech at Wolverhampton, Saturday evening, summed up the present condition of Ireland as one of famine, discontent, and twelve years of age. At my condemnation they had decided to leave their country, and take up their abode in a town of Germany, somewherein the Rhine provestication of the some statement of th of the land laws, rack rent, and the discouragement of every form of trade revival. The remedy consisted in the sessed about them. Doubtless they considered me as having long since fallen into cultivation, and the introduction of a system of loans to oppressed tenants in order to enable them to tide over the search of them, no town—hardly a vil-London, Dec. 25.—A serious riot occurred yesterday among soldiers belonging to the Enniskillen Buffs, stationed at Canterbury. Quickly mastering my enotion, I followed the party at a distance till I saw them enter a somewhat solitary but neat cottage. I soon learned from the proprietor of the house that "the good people," as he called them, had rented and occupied the house for about a year. I did not dare to follow the impulse of my did not dare to follow the impulse of my heart, and rush at once to press them in my arms: sudden joy, I knew, is sometimes as fatal as sudden fright. I therefore hastened back to my own apartments, and addressed a few lines to my wife. The substance of my letter was this; "Some one who knows, can assure you that your husband fortunately escaped his prison in Paris, and has been searching for you the last two years in all parts of the Rhine provinces. Prepare yourself for the happiness of seeing him again in a short time."

A few days afterwards followed a second letter with the brief information: "Your husband has learned your dwelling-place, and if nothing happens will be with you

True Womanhood.

However much it may be discredited by people with advanced ideas, the highest type of womanhood and the highest place of honor is that of the Roman matron, whose jewels were a faimily of pure daughters and strong, dutiful sons. This is old-fashioned and humdrum sermonizing, but, if it is not true, set us a picture of something better. true, set us a picture of something better. The woman who raises such a family is a heroine. She endures mental and physical care and pain. She meets and overcomes great obstacles by patient and persevering effort. She is compelled to win moral victories over herself in order that she may win them over the wayward tendencies of her children. And the value of her ultimate victory is seen in the value. reduction of the franchise. All prospect of a session without trish business at the top of it is now gone. Mr. Parnell is determined to force Mr. Gladstone to show his hand in case no Irish reforms are promised in the Queen's Speech at the opening of Patliament. Parnell is so busy with private and public affairs that he will probably be unable to go to America to attend the forthcoming convention, but if he cannot attend Mr. Sexten will probably represent him.

Women often repine at their circumstanced limits of usefulness. They would be great writers, great reformers, or employ the power of great wealth. A small raincloud which pours its refreshment on a small field will produce the sweetness of bloom and fruits—scatter it over a wide area, and it will not even lay the dust—it will do no good whatever. It the energies of some of our popular lite rary women were concentrated on a home and a family of children, there would be a harvest of happiness and virtue to show far it-thrown broadcast it becomes a profitless sprinkle of rain.

A history has been published lately of the Roman Catholic Archbishops of Tuam, from which it would seem that the prelates of the diecese long had a hard time of it. Here is a description of the celebration of Mass there in Cromwell's day: "On a Sunday morning a portable altar and a vestment box, generally painted red, were brought into some con-venient sand pit, round which multitudes gathered. The priest, without cap or soutane, hurried on his vestment. The lights on the improvised altar were rushes dipped in grease, stuck in raw potatoes, and placed in lanterns, which served as candlesticks. Scouts were stationed around, and Mass was hurried through as quckly as possible. One of these Mass sand pits still exist near Tuam.
