

Gleaned by the Way.

Hard work is a panacea for hard luck.

Do you ever have any quarrels in your women's clubs? Oh, no; we call them "debates."

A boy and his mother never agree as to the age when a boy should change from short to long pants.

Why do some husbands call their wives Ducky? Because they develop large bills.

Varicose Ulcers Cured. Miss Elizabeth Campbell, of Sheridan Ave., Toronto, states: "About eight years ago I hurt my leg near the ankle and the result was what doctors called varicose ulcers. I was treated in two Toronto hospitals and sent away without being cured. From the very start Dr. Chase's Ointment helped me and by persistent use it has entirely cured me."

Old Stainbynt is a very near relative of yours, I believe?

Near! He's more than that! He's close!

Celia—Don't you know her? Why, she lives in the same square with you, Delia—Yes, but she's not in the same circle.

The Doctor's First Question Always the first question a doctor puts to his patient is, "What is the matter with you?"

He—Let me kneel in the dust at your feet, and tell you how much I adore you. She—I beg pardon, sir, but there is no dust on our carpets.

Farmer Wayback—Here's a column in the daily paper headed "The People's Forum." His Wife—Per who, Silas? Why don't you read on?

Tom—Do you think your cousin Julia would marry me if I asked her? Jack—Well, I have always considered her a sensible sort of girl—still, she might.

CASTORIA Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Lydia—I'm just as vexed as I can be with Tom. He kissed me right before all the girls! Mary—Well, isn't that better than if he had kissed all the girls before you?

She—I can't understand why Lord Busted wants a divorce. His wife had half a million when he married her.

Me—Yes, and she's got every penny of it still. That's trouble.

Jones—Do you believe there is safety in numbers? Skorchor—Sure, whenever I'm exceeding the speed limit I hang some other chap's number on the back of my auto!

Mrs Meekton—What do you think, James! Mother says she wants to be cremated.

James—All right, tell her to get her things on and I'll take her down now.

Piles To those who suffer from this painful and annoying ailment, the only relief is to use Chamberlain's Pile Ointment.

Dr. Chase's Ointment The Ointment is used for hemorrhoids, piles, itching, and soreness of the rectum.

By the way, where did you first meet your wife?

At her college the day she graduated.

Ah! I see. Her commencement was your finish.

Teeter, Salt Rheum and Eczema. These are diseases for which Chamberlain's Salve is especially valuable.

It quickly allays the itching and smarting and soon effects a cure. Price, 25 cents. For sale at Rand's Drug Store.

"Rastus, you look as if you had been run through a cider mill. What's the matter with your face?" "Ovahconfidence, sub." "Overconfidence?" "Yes, sub. Ovahconfidence in my jaigs, I thought I could call a man a liak, an' git away—an' I didn't git away, sub."

Once a Scotsman was visiting New York, and coming across a statue of Washington stood gazing at it.

Just then a Yankee came up and said to Sandy: "There's a good man. A lie never passed his lips."

No, said the Scotsman, I suppose he talked through his nose like the rest of you."

Do Not Crowd the Season. The first warm days of spring bring with them a desire to get out and enjoy the exhilarating air and sunshine.

Children that have been housed all winter are brought out and you wonder where they all came from. The heavy winter clothing is thrown aside and many shed their flannels. That a cold wave comes and people say that grip is epidemic.

Colds at this season are even more dangerous than in mid-winter, as there is much more danger of pneumonia. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, however, and you will have nothing to fear. It always cures, and we have never known a cold to result in pneumonia when it was used. It is pleasant and safe to take. Children like it. For sale by Rand's Drug Store.

The Treating Custom. At the door of the treating custom lies the blame for a large part of the drinking and drunkenness that is working such havoc on every side.

The first glass is often put to the lips by some good-natured friend, with no thought of turning the feet of another victim into the path that leads to ruin and death. In a multitude of cases the fear of being thought mean or unsocial leads to the taking of the stuff that befuddles the brain and robs the nerves of their steadiness.

There are many earnest advocates of a law against treating. This would undoubtedly go far towards eradicating the awful disease of intemperance. But we need not wait for such a law to be placed on the statute books.

We can be legislators in our own lives. We can record our resolve, that we will neither be treated nor treat, first, for our own safety and success, and secondly, because we will not be the source of injury to others.

A single glance at the fearful results of indulgence in strong drink shows us sufficient reasons for such a resolve. No wonder is it that the wise writer of Proverbs saw peril in even looking upon the wine that hides so many sorrows in every sparkling cup.

The Ways of the Horse. A horse and buggy stood in front of a clubhouse. As a man came out of the house and got in the buggy the horse gave a sudden plunge and started to run away. At about the fifth bound a colored man came to the rescue and brought the animal to a halt.

The driver got out, patted the horse, thanked the colored man and handed him a greenback.

Look's like he's had a scare of some sort, been hit or somethin', suggested the colored man.

Hardly that. He's a slow-going, cool-headed old chap, and there's nothing around to frighten him. Got to dozing and had a bad dream, eh, Billy?

Then the driver gave a final love slap to Billy's brown flank; jumped inside and clattered away.

And a woman who happened to be passing the clubhouse considered it her bounden duty to stop at a tree box and say things to a small boy who was fitting a pebble to a bean shooter.

Men Rule by Force, Women by Charm. And yet because they live less strenuously women neglect the early evidence of failing vigor. The wise woman will not permit her charms to be robbed of by ill-health. When she feels appetite failing, nerves getting on edge, color fading, she takes Ferrozone. How it sharpens the appetite! How quickly rich blood is available to restore color to the cheeks, buoyancy to the step. Better try Ferrozone. You'll feel like a new being, with new vigor and ability to confront life's difficulties. You are sure to bless the day you commenced Ferrozone. Sold everywhere in box form.

Rheumatic Pains Relieved. B. F. Crocker, Esq., 84 years of age, and for many years Justice of the Peace at Martinsburg, Iowa, says: "I am terribly afflicted with acute rheumatism in my left arm and right hip. I have used three bottles of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and it did me lots of good. Sold by A. V. Rand."

Backache, "The Blues"

Both Symptoms of Organic Derangement in Women—Thousands of Sufferers Find Relief.

How often do we hear women say: "I feel as though my back would break," or "Don't speak to me, I am all out of sorts." These significant remarks prove that the system requires attention.

Backache and "the blues" are direct symptoms of an organic trouble which may be caused by diseased kidneys or some derangement of the organs. Nature's remedy is the Vegetable Compound.

For me, I suffered with irregularities, headache and severe pains all through my life. I used a dozen different kinds of medicine prescribed by the doctor and none did me any good.

My general health began to improve when I began to use the Compound. In three weeks I was a perfectly well woman.

No other medicine has such a record of cure of female troubles. No other medicine in the world has received this widespread and unqualified endorsement. Refuse to buy any substitute.

FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN. Remember, every woman is cordially invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham if there is anything about her symptoms she does not understand.

Mrs. J. P. Oakes of Prince of Wales Hotel, Head of St. Margaret's Bay, near Halifax, Halifax County, Nova Scotia, Canada, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham—After what your Vegetable Compound did for me, I am a firm believer that it is a wonderful medicine, and that any woman who is troubled with any of the ills we suffer from should try it and she will soon be convinced of its worth.

My husband and I are both well and happy. I am a firm believer in your medicine. I think it has no superior and I cordially endorse it.

Mrs. Anna R. MacNamee of corner Queen and Wellington Streets, Kingston, Ont. writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done all the good in the world. Ask Mrs. Pinkham's Advice—A Woman Best Understands a Woman's ills.

Carnegie and the Man Who Drinks.

No man to-day has the attention of the world more than Andrew Carnegie. People not only wonder at his gifts, they listen when he speaks. He is not infallible, but his words are apt to be weighted with sagacious observations and practical wisdom.

"A drinking man," said Mr. Carnegie, "has no place in a railway system; indeed he should have no place anywhere."

One of the compelling reasons why Mr. Carnegie has done and is doing so much to multiply libraries all over the country, is the fact that the free public library, with the reading habit which it creates, can be made so powerful an offset to the ever-cursing saloon.

If Mr. Carnegie owned a railway and was responsible for its management, he would make short work of a drinking engineer, a drinking conductor, with a drinking man up in the switch tower, or with a drinking man in the seat of a train dispatcher. It would be a criminal carelessness that should tolerate such a person in such a position. Let some terrible disaster happen—as, alas, too often such disasters have happened through criminal carelessness, and the public be made aware of the facts, the general demand would be quick and incisive for the enforcement of at least one form of prohibition law.

The foremost practical statesman in France at the present time is Premier Waldeck-Rousseau. He is a patriot who sees that the worst peril threatening his own country is not from without, but from insidious foes from within. There is no other country in the world where so much intoxicating liquor is drunk per capita as in France. Naturally, this fact is awakening alarm. Said this French statesman in a recent address: "The common use of alcoholic drinks threatens the perpetuity of the race."

If, according to Mr. Carnegie, "a drinking man should have no place in a railway system," where may he go to find his own safe and acceptable place? Surely not in any department of our stupendously vast and exciting industrial system of the present day. The great trusts of the time have, at the best, all they can do to have and to hold the necessary confidence of the public to keep them from tumbling into confusion any unlucky moment. Let it be generally known that any of the men placed at the head of enormous financial enterprises, with unwholesome brains liable any time to be set on fire with some loosened impulse or caprice, and such carelessness could not fail to be criminal.

In the Fortnightly Review, J. Holl Schooling makes a most suggestive comparative study of the drink bills of the United States, the United Kingdom, Germany and France. Bad as the drink habit is the United States is, comparison on the whole is strikingly in its favor. Mr. Schooling's conclusion of the whole matter is that, from the mere plane of national industrial leadership, "the developed alertness and prompt energy of the American may, it is quite likely, be due in some part, to their relative abstinence from alcoholic drink."

Indeed, as Andrew Carnegie says, a drinking man should have no place anywhere; least of all, in a home—Union Signal.

The Moderation to one Man is Excess to Another.

Moderation in regard to the use of intoxicating drinks is very imperfectly understood. That which is moderation to one man is excess to another. That which is moderation to-day proves to-morrow an excess in the case of the same individual. One regards moderation as the occasional use of liquor in small quantities. Another regards it as the daily use of it in any quantities short of getting in to a state of intoxication. No one can draw a line forming the boundary between moderation and excess, hence the passing of hundreds of thousands of our fellow men annually, almost unaware to themselves, from the former state to the latter. The regular use of liquors, whether in small or large quantities, is a most dangerous and deceitful practice, for it is the broad way that leads into the horrid region of intemperance, where licentiousness, wretchedness, shame and death reign. Is not the word moderation wrongly applied when used in connection with intoxicating drinks? What is moderation? Is it not the right use of things beneficial, and total abstinence from things injurious? If so, and I believe the definition will bear investigation, I maintain that the only moderation possible in regard to intoxicating

Effective Cure for Coughs and Colds

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Limes and Turpentine is far more than a cough remedy. It cures the cold as well as loosens the chest and eases the cough. It takes the pain out of the bones, and reaches the very seat of disease when there is pain in the chest. It would not be too much to say that Dr. Chase's Syrup of Limes and Turpentine has saved thousands of people from pneumonia and consumption. There is not a village or hamlet in Canada where this famous family treatment is not recognized as a most unusually effective cure for croup, bronchitis, asthma, coughs and colds.

Mrs. R. D. Turner, Broadview, N.W.T., writes: "We have seven children and have used Dr. Chase's Syrup of Limes and Turpentine for every one of them from infancy with good results. We got four bottles at a time and find it a good remedy to break up cold on the lungs."
