A Positive Cure For Rheumatism

For many years, both during Father Morrissey's lifetime and since he passed away, his No. 7 Tablets have been curing many of the worst cases of rheumatism in Eastern Canada.

During his lifetime it became the custom, when people could not get relief from other sources, to consult Father Morrissey, and few indeed did so in vain. His standard prescription came to be called

Rev. Father Morrissey

Father Morrissey's No. 7 Tablets

and it can now be procured from any druggist or dealer in medicine.

No. 7 Tablets act directly on the kidneys, stimulating them so that they can remove from the blood all the Uric Acid, which alone causes the rheumatism. Two or three weeks' treatment cures ordinary cases, while with the worst chronic cases it seldom takes more than three or four boxes of No. 7 Tablets to thoroughly eradicate the rheumatism from the system.

In every case, right from the start, the sufferer gets relief from the torturing pains and aches. We would be glad to refer you to one-time rheumatics, now well through taking Father Morrissey's No. 7 Tablets.

THE TRUMPET'S CALL

What says the old rhyme?
Calderwood was fair to see,
When it gait to Camelrie;
But Calderwood was fairer still,
When it grew ower Crosswood Hill.

Sir Nigel's old chum, General Ramercules, was laid up with the gout and jungle fever, and their political friend, Licksapital, was absent in Parliament—where, like a true Scottish M. P., he served to fill the house to vote with the Lord advocate or the majority, to work on all committees (which paid); but, of course, remaining as oblivious of Scottish interests as of those of the Sioux Indians.

Now that he was residing almost permanently at the old manor house—the Place of Calderwood, as it was named par excellence—Sir Nigel became somewhat infected by his daughter's melancholy. Thoughts of his two dead sons—Nigel, who fell at Goojerat, of his pet boy, Archie, and also of his nephew, his favorite sister's only son, exposed to all the perils of disease and war in Turkey—recurred to him again and again, as he wandered through the rooms and under the old lindes trees that had often echoed to their voices in infancy; and he thought of how the old estates, and the title first granted by King Charles to Sir Norman Calderwood, Primus Baronetorum Scotia, would go after his death, an event which he knew must happen some day; for, though hale and hearty yet, he felt that he rode a stone or two heavier now, was apt to "hunk" at a sunk hand, and from the perils of the mouth for his bride had now.

Even Cora's old song of "The Thistle and the Rose" only served to make him sad—to make him think of those who had sung it long ago; and then he would order another bottle of that rare, creamy old claret, that Mr. Hims kept among the porbees in a particular corner of the cellar, for themselves.

Glen, and his favorite hunters, Saline and Splinterbar, were forgotten in their stalls.
Why was this?
On a Sunday towards the end of September—a Sunday which many must recall with sorrow—mysteriously, as if borne in the air, there passed a whisper over all the land of a great event that had happened far, far away—and that whisper found an echo in many a heart and home in England—in many an Irish mud cabin and Scottish glen—in many a high and many a humble dwelling.

In the quaint old village kirk of Calderwood, during the morning service, it passed along the pews from ear to ear among the people, even to the old haunted stile of St. Margaret, where Cora sat (her sweet, earnest eyes intent on the preacher, though her thoughts were far away), beside her father in his carved oak seat, with all its armorial bearings overhead; for he was lord of all the glen and manor—a little king, but a very kind one, among the peasantry there.

So, on this calm, sunny summer morning, when no sound disturbed the preacher's voice but the rustle of the oak woods without, or the twittering of the martins in their nests among the Gothic carvings, there came gravely to the pastoral glen—vaguely, wildly, no one knew how—news that a great battle had been fought far far away in the East, and that he had lost four, five, some said even six thousand men; but that he was, Cora, victorious.

Pacing in his sermon, while his eyes kindled and his cheek flushed as they had never done when detailing the bloody wars of the Jews and Egyptians, the aged minister announced the tidings from the pulpit, amidst (the first false rumor) "that the Duke of Cambridge had fallen at the head of the Guards and our own Highland lads, as he led them, sword in hand, up the breast of the Alma."

A LIBERAL OPINION.

The Chatham Commercial (Liberal) gives the following frank opinion of the pitiable successor of the defunct Herald: "The Fredericton Mail says, 'the Chatham Commercial don't think very highly of the Mail.' If all the statements which that journal makes were as near the truth as that just quoted, the Commercial would have no fault whatever to find with it. There are a great many members of the Mail's own party who don't think very highly of it either, to judge by their conversation."

Why are gloves unsalable articles? Because they are made to be kept on hand.

CENTENARIAN DEAD.

Hazleton, Pa., April 8.—Ransom Young, who celebrated his 100th birthday last November, died today. He was the nineteenth president, and it is related that he never went to bed without a chew of tobacco in his mouth, and that he always swallowed it. Physicians say the tobacco was a stimulant and served to prolong his life. He was a farmer.

Lumbermen Anxious for Rain. Parties who are on the outlook for good driving conditions, now that the lumber is on the banks of the streams, say that the only hope of getting the logs out successfully with the freshest is in the chance of a steady season of rain.
