MARKET REPORTS

State that there is no surplus of Anthracite Coal in U.S. The shortage caused the strike of Anthracite last year has not made up, and American coal will, in all probability, be hard to get and high priced. Coke is an excellent substitute for hard coal, and we have on hand a stock of that will soon be depleted, because a shortage of hard coal invariably creates an increased demand for our product. We advise our customers to book their requirements as soon as possible.

Gaekwar of Baroda.

FAMOUS RULER READS HIS OWN
OBITUARY NOTICE.

To the formidable list of notabilities who have had the privilege of reading their death notices must be added the Gaekwar of Baroda, who, it was reported, had died in a train between Berlin and Flushing. Appreciative obituary notices appeared in the newspapers, describing the Gaekwar's romantic history and his splendid work during the war. It now appears, however, that it was the Gaekwar's son, Jai Singh, who died. The Prince, who was 35, had been suffering from heart disease for some time, it was stated at the British Consulate in Flushing, and during his journey from Berlin had an attack of apoplexy. This is the second tragedy in the Gaekwar's life, for his eldest son was only a young man when he died. The latter's son, who is still a child, is heir-presumptive to the throne.

The Exodus.

It is indeed a melancholy sight for us to witness so many of our most prominent and industrious countrymen leaving our shores by every available opportunity. In fact, we understand that passages have been booked on the various steamers, running between the United States, Canada and Newfoundland, as far ahead as the last of October. This is a terrible condition of affairs, because in most cases the tide of emigration represents a class of our people that it will be impossible to replace. It may be that in some cases a single man and women leave surpluses they will return to their native land in the course of some years, but once the entire family leaves, after having disposed of their property and effects, it is rarely they return to their former homes, and thus our country is deprived of those who were the producers in every branch of business.

During the latter part of the 19th century, the periodic depressions in the pursuit of the fisheries seemed to be of more frequent occurrence than in early years. It must also be taken into account that at the conclusion of the American Civil War, a new era of prosperity opened up for that country, and a great industrial boom was ushered in—then it is not to be wondered at that Newfoundland began to feel the effects of the magnetic attraction of the United States, which was felt on the continent of Europe. This little island lying at the very door of the Great Republic was sure to be smitten with the epidemic of emigration.

But in those days the emigration was chiefly confined to St. John's and some of the larger towns in our country, and the emigrants in the main were of the sea-faring and fishing class. But to-day the emigrants are not confined to any particular class, nor are they confined to our city of St. John's and the other cities of our country, because we find that every little town, village and hamlet in every District in the island are becoming depopulated—their homes, fishing gear, boats, traps, etc., disposed of, and the people compelled to seek a living in a foreign land. There must be a cause for all this. It would be interesting to know how many of our people have left our shores during the past three years. It is very questionable if we have one-half the fishermen prosecuting the Labrador fishery that we had say, ten years ago. Then where is it going to end? Where is our great fleet of schooners which up to a few years ago were engaged in the prosecution of the Labrador fishery, and where is the great fleet of western boats that prosecuted our great industry at Cape St. Mary's? The Portuguese, Spaniards, Frenchmen, Americans, Canadians and others can fit out in their respective countries, come out two thousand miles to the Banks of Newfoundland, and procure voyages of fish, which must certainly be a paying concern otherwise they would not continue the industry. And yet we have this great blessing at our very doors, and our captains of industry do not take advantage of these great benefits which the Almighty God has placed within our reach—these great fisheries of Newfoundland—greater than all the mines of Mexico or Peru. We repeat that the class of emigrants which is leaving our shores by every steamer cannot be replaced.

"Princes and lords may flourish or may fade—
A breath can make them as a break hath made;
But the bold fishermen our country's pride
When once destroyed can never be supplied."

Amongst the passengers on the Rosalind, bound for the United States on Saturday last, were Mr. Edward Cooper and his family, bound to the United States. For thirty-four years Mr. Cooper has been a competent, trusted and faithful assistant in the well-known photographic studio of S. H. Parsons & Sons, Prescott Street. Few people were more popular in this community than was Neddy Cooper, as he is familiarly called. Every inch a sportsman, he took the deepest interest in a most active part in our Annual Regatta, as well as in every other manly sport. He rowed in the Juvenile Race in 1889 in the old Avon, that was practically condemned, and notwithstanding that his crew had to compete against the famous Southside, Gypsy, Lilly and Mascot. ## YOUTH.

With the tilt of a song on his lips
And the glint of the sun in his eye
Which seldom a crown will eclipse,
A regular young fellow goes by.

You can tell by the tilt of his head,
By the charm of his voice and his tone,
By the grace and the spring of his tread,
That never a care has he known.

His shoulders are broad and full square,
His neck is as straight as a pine,
The color's still fresh in his hair
Which has long ago faded from mine.

Here is youth, clean and supple and strong,
Here is unburdened youth, passing by—
Oh, the years have been many and long
Since such a young fellow was I.

Yet time was I sang as does he,
And time was I laughed as I went;
Now age with its cares burdens me,
And the best of my courage is spent.

Brave boy, sing your songs while you may,
Too soon you shall look back as I,
When your temples are wearing the gray
And some regular young fellow goes by.

On several occasions he rowed in the well-known photographic studio of S. H. Parsons & Sons, Prescott Street. He had several pleasure boats for himself, having received instructions from the famous boat-builder, the late Philip Mahoney. In fact he assisted Mr. Mahoney in building his last race boat, the Daisy. We feel certain that his many friends in the city will miss the familiar figure of Mr. Cooper from amongst us, more especially from the grounds of historic Quidi Vidi during Regatta Day, and we all wish him every success and happiness in his future home in the land of the Stars and Stripes.

A Cruel Bereavement.

Dame Clara Butt Loses Her Eldest Son.

Widespread sympathy will be felt (says a London paper) with Mr. Kennerley Rumford and Dame Clara Butt on the death of their eldest son, Mr. R. G. M. Kennerley Rumford. Recently he underwent an operation for meningitis and died in St. Denias Shield's private hospital in Park Lane, Mr. R. G. M. Kennerley Rumford, who was only 20, was in the Eton cricket XI which drew with Harrow at Lord's last month. He scored 23 and took three wickets for 75 runs, but perhaps the best feature of his cricket in this match was his fielding. He was going on tour with the Free Foresters, but was prevented by illness. In 1922 he was also in the Eton XI. He was a member of the Eton society known as "Pop," and was appointed Keeper of the Pines at Eton in October of last year with Mr. M. R. Bridgman, son of the Home Secretary. Dame Clara Butt has one other son, Mr. Victor Kennerley Rumford, who is in the Navy, and a daughter, Joy.

INSURANCE CLASS.

Montreal, Sept. 14.—At the convention held in this city recently of a large New York life insurance company, with 342 agents present, there were seven women who belonged to the $250,000 Club. It has been the practice for some years for this company to hold a convention of agents who during 12 months obtain and pay for business to the amount of $250,000. For those energetic agents who have been so fortunate as to write new policies to the sum indicated, the company provides transportation and all necessary expenses to whatever city has been selected for the gathering. These conventions alternate between East and West, and of the eight gatherings organized, three have been in Canada.

THOSE MADDENING PEOPLE!

People who impose on other people are bad citizens. They are a great loss to society. Of course the people who permit these impostors are not as great a loss to society.

But at the same time I think they fail to do their whole duty to the community if they don't stand up for their rights when other people try to impose upon them. It's a case of spare the rod and spoil the child—and make everyone who has to deal with him thereafter suffer for your leniency.

Why I Explode.

A Letter Friend is the cause of this explosion. Here is what she writes:

"There is a couple living in the apartment upstairs. They have no bath nor hot water tank. They pay $20 per month, we pay $40 per month. We both cook with wood stoves. The hot water tank is downstairs so their hot water that they use comes from the wood we burn. Do you think it is right for me to stand by the stove all day and burn wood for their benefit? One Sunday we stayed home all day so we could bathe at night. But before we bathed they drew it all off. They have no consideration for other people at all."

"I have a telephone. It was in the house when we moved in. We, being tenants too, they took advantage of it and had an extension put in without saying a word to us. We pay $2 for it. They pay 50 cents. We have to bother with their rings also. If the people are bad all right but us both being tenants someone always has to be the goat. When the phone rings I answer it and get told they 'have the line, please' and I pay for the main phone. I don't feel like we ought to move on account of such people who want everything for nothing."

Don't You Itch To Get At Them?

Doesn't that letter make you just itch to get at those people?

Wouldn't you just like personally to see that they paid their share of the telephone and that some adjustment was made about the hot water tank? Wouldn't you go to considerable trouble to see that they got what was coming to them?

Even in a story it exasperates me to read about a character who puts it all over the rest and never gets his comeuppance. And this is no story. It is a real life happening.

It is simply incomprehensible to me that anyone should have to put up with such treatment for so long. And yet people are constantly doing things like that.

Almost Immortal Patience.

I have a friend who has been living with her the most selfish old lady in captivity. When a friend broke her arm she engaged a maid to do the work, though she could ill afford it, so that the mother-in-law should not have to do too much. But she did ask her one day to sew a button on her coat. And the old lady sewed it on saying a word to us. We pay $2 for

"I think, Margaret, that if you have any more buttons to sew on you had better get the tailor to do it."

And my friend never said a word.

Which, I think, was almost immoral.

That old lady has imposed upon people from her earliest years and everyone who has permitted to do so has made her a little bit worse. It is almost as much a duty not to be a doormat as it is not to wipe one's feet on folks.

I hope my Letter Friend will agree to that and will rise up and give those people who are imposing on her what they deserve.

And if the old lady should also see this, I shouldn't be altogether heart-broken.
