THE GIRL THAT

Her Letters and Gifts of Fudge Are Biggest Prizes to Man in Khaki; Will Help Win War

The best moral influence that the soldier in camp or at the front has is the girl he left behind him. She stands be-tween him and wrong, balks temptanhabits his dreams and keeps ris ideals and his thinking clear. She may be a pink and white girl who loves pleasure more than washing the loves great mother, or she may be dishes for her mother, or she may be dark eyed and soulful with her thoughts fixed in a career, but to the soldier looking through the haze of miles and ndowing her with all the fine qualities endowing her with all the time qualities his fond fancy can conjure up, she is his anchor to windward, his defense and stay. Ask any officer who studies his men, who is anxious about the influences that who is always subjects the soldier army life always subjects the soldier to, and who wants to keep his men clean and upright, and he'll emphasize the wonderful influence of the soldier's sweetheart. And he'll never make light of the soldier kit, the wrist watch, the field chicken, the box of fudge, nor of field chicken, the box of fudge, nor of the syrupy letters that pass between the two.
