

Khyber Pass Could Be Tightly Closed Against a Strong Enemy.

New York, Oct. 29.—In an editorial headed, "Can Russia Invade India?" the Sun says:

The present policy of the British Government towards Afghanistan and the frontier tribes appears to be based on a memorandum written by Lord Roberts at Kabul, dated May 29, 1880. It so clearly sums up the policy of those who would preserve Afghanistan and the wild tribes of the northwest frontier as a natural obstacle to a Russian invasion that it is worth quoting. Speaking with all the authority of experience he wrote:

"We are now fully aware of the extraordinary difficulties which Russia would have to encounter were she at any time to advance upon India via Kabul, and to how great an extent we could injure and harass her by raising the tribes along the north-west frontier. The longer and more difficult the line of communication is, the more numerous and greater the obstacles which Russia would have to overcome; and so far from shortening our line of communication, I would let of difficulties extend to the very mouth of the Khyber Pass."

The late Sir Edward Hamley, in 1878, held the same opinion, and would have resisted a Russian invasion by blockading the mouths of the Khyber, the British side with an entrenched camp, armed with powerful artillery, which would have prevented an invading army from ever issuing from it. Col. H. R. Hanna, who formerly belonged to the Punjab frontier force and subsequently commanded at Delhi, holds the same view.

On the whole, it does not appear that a Russian invasion of India would be practicable except with the consent of Afghanistan and in alliance with it; and that could not be obtained so long as the British Government maintained a cordial and wise policy toward the Amir and his people.

Two German cities—Cologne and Dortmund—possess an apparatus for the burning of garbage by electricity. Dr. Gabriel, a Paris physician, says obesity is a nervous disorder, caused by a form of dyspepsia.

THERE IS NOTHING equal to Mother Graves' Worm Exterminator for destroying worms. No article of its kind has given such satisfaction.

The use of saccharin, a product of coal tar, instead of sugar is growing. It is not only used to sweeten beer, but it is now also employed in the manufacture of syrups, jams, lemonades, wines (especially champagne), cider, brandy, pastry and chocolate.

A GENERAL FAVORITE.—In every place where introduced Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil has met with the warmest of reputation, showing that the sterling quality of this oil is well known. It is in general use in Canada and other countries as a household medicine, and the demand for it each year shows that it is a favorite wherever used.
