Banking in Canada, At the American Banking Convention held at New Orleans last week William C. Corn-wall, eashier of the Buffalo Bank, Buffalo, N.Y., read a paper on the Canadian banking system, which he considers has reached a degree of excellence beyond which it will be

At that convention were assembled the leading banking experts of the United States, and Mr. Cornwall's address was received with great interest. He said:

with great interest. He said:

Canada has for many years existed under a banking law, which, with additions and improvements from time to time, has given her a circulating medium fully meeting all the requirements of every season, both as to elasticity and safety, and to-day, with the improvement brought about by the amended law gone into effect last July, she has, I believe, for her needs the most perfect currency system of any nation in the world, except, perhaps, that of Scotland, after whose system hers is closely modelled.

He then proceeded to explain the Canadian banking law and the practical effects of it, How depositors are guaranteed against it, How depositors are guaranteed against loss, the nature of that guarantee, the rarity of bank failures and the comparatively unerring way in which depositors and note-holders are recuperated. It is pointed out ized. Here and there a branch of trade has holders are recuperated. It is pointed out how, under our systems, we escape those currency panics so frequently occurring in the whole expectations have not been caught in a breeze, but taken on the united States. When alterations have realized. During the week there has currency panies so frequently occurring in the United States. When alterations have been found necessary, as in 1880 and 1890, the Canadian politicians did not seek to make party capital by getting up party cries on the currency question, but all joined together and "from the flery struggle wrested a more

One of the most important features of the Canadian system, as viewed by Mr. Cornwall, is the institution of branches. Only seven banks in the Dominion are without ranches, while the other thirty-eight control about four hundred branch offices. He quotes Mr. Walker, general manager of the Bank of Commerce, as saying, "These great banks with their branches gather up the money lying idle in one locality and trans-mit it automatically to another locality which has enterprise enough to use it."
Thus from end to end of Canada the extreme variation of rules of interest is not over two

Mr. Cornwall says the American currency never did possess the feature of elasticity, while the Canadian currency possesses the two important features of security and elasticity. The Toledo Bee has a long article endorsing Mr. Cornwall's views, and says that while the United States has been floundering along disastrously a brief look into Canada would see solved the problems that have defeated them so far.

To temper the blow to the sugar-lipped corporations, societies and representative gatherings that intercepted all his journeys with fulsome addresses, we assume that these documents were not thrust into the first stove encountered by Lorne's private secretary, but were allowed to accumulate in a large waste basket for one grand terminal holocaust.

The people of Canada are sadly possessed with this illuminated address habit. But that is a contingency of the future. At present the self-respecting citizen has but to see that he does not contribute to the bonfire of illuminated addresses with which the present Governor-General will close his incumbency. Drop a practice that is ridiculous if not humiliating.
