are now in London two very singular human beings, of a race which has hitherto been ve-ry little known to the civilized world. They came from South Africa, where they are called Earthmen. They are totally distinct from all other known African races -- as much so as if they had dropped upon this earth from another planet. They are diminutive in size—more pygmies—and unacquainted even with the art of building huts. They shelter themselves in caves, and crevices in the earth; when these are wanting they make artificial scoopings on the surface, which they line with leaves and cover with branches .-The Hottentots and Bushmen are the avowed enemies of the Earthinen, and when they meet them they will shoot them down like vermin. The poor little defenceless Earthmen have no retuge but in holes, trees, or thickets, and the tribe is vast verging to ex tinction. They are a poor weak people-one of Nature's freaks-and destined not to perpetutuate their race - Few colonists have seen them; and although it it known that a few still linger in the mountains, these are rapidly dying away, and will soon become a tradition of an elvise africe race of old.
