Upper Wyndham St.

The crowd at the theatre was long and very mixed. A stout, coarse man amused himself during the long wait by saying sweet nothings to a pretty girl who stood next to him. "I wish you would leave me alone!" she said, angrily. "All right, all right," say dear!" said the coarse one; "but don't eat me!" The girl looked him up and down. "You're in no danger of that!" she said; "to-day is porkless day."
