

cream of tartar and soda for many years, but too often with poor success, owing, I suppose, to the variable quality of the cream of tartar. I desire to use baking powder, but find myself puzzled to determine which kind is pure. Can't you give me a simple test that I can make at home which will settle the vexed question? If so you will oblige

AN ENQUIRER.

In reply to our correspondent we give the following simple but effective test for baking powder :—

Mix in a tin cup, or other small suitable vessel, one heaping teaspoonful of the powder with one teaspoonful of water, or a little more water if required to wet the powder to the consistency of paste. Place it over a hot fire, stir to prevent burning, and let it boil rapidly for a few moments. At intervals lift the cup from the fire, and smell, and notice whether you detect the odour of AMMONIA in the steam that rises. Pure baking powder will not give the faintest odour of ammonia.
