Lo: Don, Nov. 20.—The next few days will rith as events of more than ordinary importance in the current parliamentary history of the current parliamentary history of the current parliamentary history of the current parliamentary data on the cur nmons there will be a vigorous debate on the ruellite proposal to extend the scope of the A ruelitie proposal to extend the scope of the shourne Act. At Berlin the session of the schebag will be opened with a speech from the lew Emperor. In the French Chamber of Deputies the question of supply is likely to give rise to a heated discussion, even if the extraordinary course of the committee of revision is not made the subject of inquiry. The Ashbourne Act, passel in 1835, appropriated $25,000,000 radvances to the Irish tenants who might dere to purchase their holdings upon certain re to purchase their than teams who might dere to purchase their holdings upon certain pecified conditions. So favorable to the landards are the e conditions that it is estimated has the Duke of Abercorn alone would gain 1,259,000 by the sale of his Irish estates upon uch terms. It is not, therefore, hard to undertand why the Torles have now determined to dd $25,000,000 to the sum available for the urposes of the statute above mentioned. Glad ton, however, will offer an amendment provid-ag for the extinction or the material reduction of the arrears which press so heavily on the great majority of Irish tenants. This amendment is expected to be so drawn as to invite the aupport of some Liberal-Unionists, but that such defections will be numerous enough to seriously weaken the normal government majority is scarcely hoped for. The debate, nevertheless, will have the good effect of forcing the Home Hule question once more into the foreground and of bringing home to English people the fact that the British parliament, so long as the Unionists control it, will apply no remedies to the grievances of Ireland, except such as are approved of, if not concocted, by the landlord party.

The speech of young Kaiser William the Second to the Reichstag will be examined with anxiety by his subjects, who already groan under the German military system because there have been lately premonitions of renewed demands for army appropriations. The semicfficial German press seems to be working up a war scare like that which preceded the last request for a supplemental grant. It is pointed out for instance that King Milan's situation at Belgrade is so precarious that Austria may at any moment be forced to interpose for the maintenance of order in Servia. Such a step it is added would certainly provoke a counter des monstration on Russia's part against Bulgaria.
To aid in overcoming the reluctance of the German people to submit to further fiscal exactions, stress is laid upon the recent concentration of Russia's forces on her southwestern frontier and the withdrawal of two divisions from the army caucus, is described as an indication that understanding has been reached between the Czar and Sultan. The probability that a new Russian loan will be taken is also used to new Russian loan will be taken is also used to excite misgivings, and although not much is publicly said about the incessant preparations for the contingency of war which are going on in France, the fact is relied upon that the influence of the German tax-payers that the Reichstag will respond to the appeal for an additional outlay on the means for national defence seems to be taken for granted, owing to ditional outlay on the means for national defence seems to be taken for granted, owing to the extreme weakness aroused by the Opposition, composed of so-called new German Liberal. and Socialists. It is not quite certain, however, the Clericals will be found tractable on this oc casion, for Ultramontane journals are showing signs of serious discontent, and Herr Windorst's visit to the Vatican can scarcely bode Il to Bismarck.

LONDON, Nov. 21—Henry Labouchere says: be feeling with regard to the action of the arnell commission is growing stronger every ty, and to judge by observations which have lien from the president, Sir James Hannen, it ould seem the commissioners themselves are beginning to perceive they have fallen into the trap laid for them by the Attorney-General in his double capacity as the Times' advocate and member of the Tory Government. At present every species of outrage, whether true or false, is being put in, the excuse being that the Attor-ney-General will connect tham with the Nationalists' speeches. The connection, however, can only consist in this, that the speeches were made and the outrages took place. Whether one was and the outrages took place. Whether one was the result of the other is and must be a matter she occupied while the train was in history, and nothing can convince her that she was not confronted by "Jack the Ripper. In North Lindon, Saturday night a lady's hair was severed from her head while she slept, and a note was found on her pillow reading: "This is just to of opinion, but if an opinion is to be formed on the cause of the outrages, it is clear it will be obligatory on the defendants to how that there were other causes which, ir espective of speeches might have led to the same result. It will, therefore, be necessary for them to produce all the victims of eviction and excessive rents. Excessive rents, followed by evictions, are, it will be contended by many, sufficient cause if rethe outrages. Where then is this going to Count Herbert V n Bismarck is abourdly des cribed as perhaps the most rising man of the day in the field of European state craft. So far is this from being the case that I hear from a person, who is behind the scenes at Berlin, that Count Herbert's days at the foreign office are numbered, and that on the retirement of Prince Bismarck, which is certainly to take place next spring; he will be practically shelved by being destratched to London as ambassador. The fact is, Count Herbert, instead of being a man of great political talent, is simply nothing beyond a manly, agreeable German, with a great father. to guide him. The most rising of all European politicians is Count Von Waldersee, who will be defacto ruler of the German Empire in conjunction with the Kaiser before another year has passed.

LONDON, Nov. 22.-Up to four o'clock this norning nothing has transpired to show that new Whitechapel horror has occurred. andoners have heard of newspaper made geneale, and after the strange experience yesterday iwill be hard to deny that there are also news-aper-made murders. For an hour or two yes-erday Londen was encouraged to believe that the Whitechapel miscresut had added one more to ais list. For an hour or two more it was told he failed in the fatal stroke by a bair's breadth, but that the woman lay at the point of death. Then slowly London was allowed as best it could in the race of extras and frantic correspondents to obtain possession of the plan fact that a man and a woman had wrangled in a ommon lodging house, and the man had infig)

The half dreamen woman raised the slarm and the man was pursued but escaped, though the shole affair happened in the morning in one of the most densely populated districts of London, and though the was a hoe and cry at his heels. For a time everyone ballieved the murderer had a last been caught in the act. For all that the supposed migrerant and cry at h is heels. For a time everyone halleved the murderer had a least been caught in the act. For all that whe supposed microscape got cl ar away. The scene of the adventure was: a the hear, of the neighborhood which all un interacted to be under partol night and day by vigils ace committee and by representatives a number room in the common lodging house and order. The supposed murderer left an upper room in the common lodging house passed through the kitchen which was full of lodgers—most or all of them men—ran into the street with some of the men after him, and was a little pressed for time that he was able to turn and strike one of his pursuers on the face before he finally vanished. Nothing happened to him; no indiguant citizen tripped him up, and above all, no policeman barred his way. It is idle to say he was not the man whom every body wants to catch. The really interesting in cident of the day is another letter from "Jack the Ripper," dated Portsmouth. Here it is:—Dear Boss.—It is no good for you to look for me in London because I am not there. Don's trouble yourself about me till I return, which will not be very long. I like the work too well to leave it long. Oh that was such a jolly job the last one! I had plenty of time to do it properly. The next lot I mean to do with a vengence, and cut of their headed and arms. Yours, "Jack the Ripper," The letter is in the Name and the such the Ripper," The letter is in the Name and the such that it is a man with a black mustacke, ha ha! ha! When I have done another you can catch me. So good by dear boss till I return. Yours, "Jack the Ripper," The letter is in the Name handwriting as the one received just before Mary Kellv was murdered.

LONDON, Nov. 24.-The speeches of Parnell and Churchill on the Ashbourne Act, evidently made most interesting contributions to the debate. They virtually extorted from Goschen the declaration that the government would not hereafter ask for further extension of the act, and the declaration that the arrests question must and the admission that the arrears question must speadily be dealt with. There was also a curious indication of future political combinations in indication of future political combinations in Lord Randolph's deferential and friendly attitude towards the Irish leader.

The striking feature of Patnell's speech was the conservative and upright ground on which he based his first objection to the Government's proposal. He warned the Ministry that, whereas, as the Imperial exchequer would have incurred no risk by his own plan for creating a present represent the tunpeasant proprietary, there was datger that un-der the changed political conditions the debt due under the Ashbourne Act might not be

This debate upon the Ashbourne Extension
Bill, although it will fail to defaut the measure, has proved three things; first, that the Gladstonians and Parnellites have, under no circumstances, anything to hope for from the socalled dissident Liberals; secondly, the only chance of moderation and decency in the treatment of Ireland by the Unionist coalition lies in the influence served by Churchill and his fol-

There is a fast growing belief that Boulanger-viction is causing a dangerous tension, not only in political parties and groups, but in circles which have hitherto held themselves aloof from politics. The chief danger lies in the fact that, in spite of the efforts of his enemies to belittle him, Boulanger has steadily grown in popularity, and now numbers among his adherents men who six months ago were foremost in denouncing him: and it is now plainly apparent that he has distanced Jules Ferry, who is really Boulanger's only political rival, all others being out of the race.

Scares in connection with the Whitechapel murders continue and increase daily. A lady travelling in a suburban train, Saturday, was frightened into fits by a man carrying a black bag, who attempted to enter the compartment she occupied while the train was in motion, and found on her pillow reading: "This is just to show that I am about." This lady, too, believes that she was visited by the Whitecapel fiend and none other.

Assistant Commissioner Mours will, without doubt, succeed to the chief commissionership made vacant by the resignation of Charles Warren, but his lameness prevents him from mounting a house, a circumstance inducing the Queen's opposition to his appointment, as her majesty insists that the chief commissioner of the metropolitan police shall ride on horse-back on state occasions.

RELIFE FOR EMIN DELAYED.

Bealin, November 24 .- At a meeting of the Colonial company vesterday, Dr. Peters moved that the Emin Relief Expedition be delayed un-til German authority in East Africa is restored Lieutenat Wissman, in opposing the motion declared that it would take at least a year to restore German authority and that even then the proposed expedition would be unable to tra-verse the reballing districts. He was prepared, he said, to make an immediate attempt with a small expedition to reach Emin Pascha by au-other route. On this route he could obtain car-riers and the rebellion would not interfere with the expedition. He added "Emin Pascha can-not wait long. He would meanwhile lose his important position or the English would be com-pelled again to take pity on our countryman, As for myself I would no longer be able to join an enterprise trumpeted so loudly and now abandoned because no other object can be at-tained at the same time." After a long dis-

SACKVILLE'S SUCCESSOR. Löndon, Nov. 20 .- It is stated in semiofficial circles that as England's representation at Washington is second to none in importance, it ough's to be made a position commanding the very best and most practiced ability in the service of the Foreign Office.

A DEN OF HORRORS.

New YORK, Nov. 12.—The Herald states that the King's County Insane asylum is a veritable den of horrors. The asylum, including four auxiliary buildings, was constructed to accommodate 1,041 persons. It has now over one thousand six hundred persons crowded and huddled togethe. The wards are overcrowded and the hallways are full. The building is in need of many necessary repairs. The plumbing is defective, and misery is written on every side. One hundred and twenty women and sixty-six men are penned up in the basement and cellar, the walls of which are wet with moisture and slime The writer says the scenes of misery he witnessed in the institution baffle description.

"A little knowledge" is indeed a "dangerour thing"-at least it very often tends to possessor ridiculous. The following conversation among some river boatmen is sample--No. 1 .-- That was an awful cold christmas, now, I tell you. The river was frozen tight, and the thermometer went down twenty degrees below Unito. No. 2-Below which? No. 1—Below Cairo, you timber-head. Den't you know what that means? Why, you simple funderhead, you've got the wrong word en tirely. No. 1-What is it, then? No. 2-Why, so many degrees below Nero, of course. I don's knew what it means; but 1 know that's what they say when it's dreadful cold. that 'f I didn't quite catch the word, it prob bly was twenty degrees below Cicero.

The story is unseasonable, but it may be old. It was Christmas time, and Johnny's father, to punish him, told him he would send word to Santa Claus not to bring him anything. The small boy was rather broken up for a while, but presently he was seen hard at work writing what looked like a letter"What are you doing?" his father asked,
"I'm writing to Santa Claus, papa." "It ien't any use. I'll tell him not to bring you anything." Then the small boy brought over his letter—"Dear Santy Clas,—You nednt bring anything to mee this yere. I have bin a verrry badd booy. But pless bring mi good pappa a box of cigars an a wooly horse withe a long tale, an a drumm, an a horne, an a horn. an a wagin, and a bigg box of canndy, and annythin else you can think ov."

THE CHAIN AND PADLOCK IN COURT.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 24,-The examination of Charles T. Parsons, the Northampton white-slave broker, came up in the Holyoke Police Court, this morning, on a werrant charging him with illegally detaining Vincent Zibrienjotis. A second count in the warrant charge of the property of the warrant charge of the property of the warrant charge of t the warrant charges simple assault. The court room was thronged with spectators. A look of contempt was upon nearly every face in the crowded room when Parsons entered at 11.15 o'clock. As the accused and his couses, Lawyer Brocks, of springfield, marched in they were preceded by an efficer bearing the ex-chain and red padlock with which the starving Polender was chained to Parsons' waggon, and the clinking of the chain as it was thrown upon the table sent up a suggestive murmur of disapprobation from the spectators. An interpreter was awern and the Polish victim was placed on the stand.

He testified that he first met Parsons in New York the first of last May and accompanied him to the Northampton farm and was put out to work for a farmer. Remaining there a few months he came book to Northampton and was taken in charge by Parsons. He testified that Parsons chained him into the waggon before they left, with the assistance of an interpreter, and on the road to Holvoke stopped at several places to sell him. He was thinly clad, had no stockings on, and the chain was wound twice around his bare ankles.

Parsons testified that he was going to send the Pole to New York from Springfield, and chained him in the waggon so he would not escape. His testimony was given in a shame faced manner that carried little weight with

When Almoner Judd was telling how he found the slave shivering with cold so violently that he shook the waggon, and how he placed a blanket from his own waggon around the poor fellow's shoulders, the pent-up feel lage of the crowd gave way and a roar of applause shook the room, which so displeased the Judge that the court room was cleared of spectators.

The public feeling against Parsons is so bitter at Holyoke that could the people get at him a coat of tar and leathers or a lynching would inevitably result. Fearing some demonstration the police were out in force, and Parsons was brought in and taken out of the room by a side door, thus avoiding a demonstration. Judge Pearson held the accused in $2 000 ball for the Grand Jury, which he gave, his wife and son becoming surety.

The charge of arresting and illegally detaining a man without right or warrant is a very serious one, the minimum penalty being two years in jail and $1,000 fine. The judge can impose a penalty of ten years and a fine of $5,000 if he sees it. Parson's property will be attached in a civil case in behalf of the Pole.
