Toronto String Quartette

The Toronto String Quartet has long been conceded a leading place in local musical organizations, and its inalienable right to this position received ample demonstration last evening at the third concert of a series given in the Greek Theatre of the Margaret

Eaton School of Expression. It is to be regretted that Toronto music-lovers are not given more to patronizing concerts by local talent. It is doubtful if anything more satisfring, more refining, th of the quartet last evening could pe brought to our city. And yet the audience, while possibly larger than at several similar occasions this season, was by no means, numerically speaking, all that could be desired. The quartet is too well known to require more than a passing introduction. Suffice then to say that it is composed of Messrs. Frank E. Blachford, first violin; Roland Roberts, second violin; Frank Converse Smith viola, and Frederick Micolia, cello Harvey Robb was at the plano, and proved a sympathetic accompan-
