THE BANK WINS. At the non-jury sittings in Bank of Toronto v. Hamilton, the Chancellor holds that the defendant must pay the bank the balance of the three thousand dollar draft which they placed to their credit on receipt of the telegram, which read $2000 instead of $3000. The judge's judgment for plaintiff for $3000 and interest from 21st February last, but without costs.

Mr. Justice's appeal against the judgment in plaintiff's favor in Brown v. Deane came up for hearing in the Court of Appeal. A WARNING TO MORTGAGEES. The case of Aldrich v. Canada Permanent L. & S. Co. is a warning to mortgagees. The plaintiff made a mortgage of defendants covering two stores in the village of Harrow and a farm with a brick house on it three-quarters of a mile distant. Upon default the defendants offered the farm and stores for sale for $3250. The plaintiff brought an action for $3250, which was accepted by the court. The evidence showed that the defendants had not acted with the care and diligence of law requires of mortgagees, and that if the property had been sold separately they would have produced $1300 more. Accidental judgment was entered against the company for the amount of $3250. The company now appeal. Judgment was reserved.

OVER A NOTE. The facts in the appeal of the defendant Curry in Leggett v. Anderson are interesting. The well-known Mr. W. J. Curry was kind enough to endorse an accommodation note, provided a certain Mr. Barr endorsed prior to him, so as to come between him and Barr. When the note came due the makers brought an action against Curry and he says he signed it on the agreement that it should be the same as the old note, the makers agreeing to get Mr. Barr's signature ahead of Mr. Curry's. The plaintiff brought an action in the name of Mr. Barr, finding Mr. Barr's name not on it, says that the omission constitutes a bar to recovery against him and charges that the plaintiff had notice of his position. Mr. Justice Street gave judgment for plaintiff and Mr. Curry appeals. Judgment was reserved.
