

PEOPLE OF LONDON DEEPLY INTERESTED IN THE GREAT WAR

Big Audience at Patricia To See Fall of Bapaume.

SEE THE TANKS IN ACTION

Germans Driven Out of Their Carefully Prepared Positions Quickly.

Steadily increasing attendances are marking the exhibitions of the "Fall of Bapaume," official British pictures of that world-famous event showing at the Patricia Theatre all this week. In spite of the fact that the pictures are shown five times each day there is a good attendance at each performance. Tuesday was no exception, and demonstrated that in spite of reports to the contrary the people of Canada are still deeply interested in the progress of the scene depicting Canadian troops driving the Germans out of their carefully prepared positions. The scenes are not wearing repetitions of those depicted in "The Battle of the Somme," and the pictures are strikingly demonstrated by the first reels which are devoted to the first motion picture of the British navy that have been permitted since the early days of the war. Taken immediately after the battle of Jutland they depict Admiral Beatty's fleet in fighting formation and cast a new light on the methods of modern sea warfare. Even Kipling's gripping accounts of the North Sea fleet fail to bring home the work of the sailors in the manner which the pictures do.

Phases of land warfare which were noticeably absent from previous pictures are those carried out by the cavalry and motor machine gun batteries.

Shows Full Detail.
The picture shows the full detail of the preparation for the battle of the Marston, which brought the Germans out of their set positions and fortified trenches, after nearly three years of occupation. It begins with the preparation of the British, made on an unprecedented scale, and shows the arrival in France of fresh troops from England, and gives a good suggestion of the scale of the battle which was fought at the beginning of the offensive.

Realism of War.
This picture shows some of the realism of warfare and some of the glory of it. It is the most comprehensive attempt to cover the whole western front, from the German lines, the bombardments and aerial flights and the actual infantry fighting, with its inevitable losses and wounded, that the British Government has yet presented, for it shows particularly every phase of the war, from the British army at work in the field, as well as the troops from the various dominions, including the famous Lancasters from India.

See Tanks.
The authorities have softened the more dreadful parts of the picture, and much of the gruesomeness of the field has been carefully omitted, except in such cases as could not be avoided without spoiling the realism of the picture.

The tanks are shown in far more thrilling situations than the first picture of them, taken when they were introduced into warfare for the first time.

EXPLAINS WORKING OF COLD STORAGE
TO MOTHERS' CLUB

"The Relation of Cold Storage to Food Products," was the subject of an address by A. E. Silverwood before the Tecumseh Avenue Mothers' Club Tuesday night. In his address Mr. Silverwood described the growth of the cold storage industry in Canada, and the old-fashioned cellar and the pickle vat. Referring to the local situation he stated that in this country there is a short period of production, during which there was an abundance of food, followed by a long period of scarcity. This period, during which there was no production, was filled over by cold storage. With regard to the effect of the cold storage buying on the local market, he declared that the prices were not set by the demand here, but by conditions in the whole province, and that the firm buying the produce on the local market, but bought over a very large area and therefore had little effect on local prices. His remarks were always prepared to abide by the bylaw which prohibits the wholesaler or retailer from buying until the consumer has had a chance to buy on the market. If the bylaw were enforced, the prices would be favorable.

Asked whether the plan in use of going out into the country and buying up large quantities of foodstuffs did not raise the price, he replied that somebody would have to produce the produce, and if so it was to the advantage of the citizens of London. He stated that the produce stored here in cold storage, as it could then be sold from 1 to 5 per cent below the market price.

If it were not for the good opportunities offered to farmers by the local market to bring their produce to market, they would take it somewhere else, and thus make produce scarcer and higher in price here.

Couldn't Keep Back Tears

When the Nervous System Broke Down—Queer Feelings in Back of Head Caused Much Alarm.

Midland, Ont., April 23.—Collapse or breakdown of the nervous system leaves one in a most pitiable condition. Strange, queer feelings, and men, too, will weep from helplessness and despair.

The case reported here was a most severe one, as is indicated by the hysterical condition, the pains in the back of the head and the fatality of the many treatments used.

This is further evidence that the regular and persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for a reasonable length of time will positively restore the most exhausted nervous system.

Mrs. S. Sharp, Midland, Ont., writes: "About eleven years ago I had a serious nervous breakdown, and was so bad at times that I could not get back the tears. I also had a queer feeling in the back of my head. Sometimes I seemed to be going backwards, I could not do anything, and finally could do no work at all. I tried other remedies and doctors' medicines, but they only gave me temporary relief. Last Fall I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and had not taken very many until I found I was getting better. I kept on taking them, and am at present greatly improved. I was now able to do my work, and they have strengthened me splendidly. I can highly recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for nervous trouble of any kind."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, on Edmondson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be taken by any cheap substitute. Imitations only disappointing.

GREAT WORK FOR CHILDREN AND SOLDIERS

Advertiser Illustration

There are two classes of patients at the Queen Alexandra Sanatorium whose cases make, if anything, perhaps a little keener appeal than all others. These are the children and the returned soldiers, and the fact that the sanatorium is proving effective in bringing back rosy cheeks and strong bodies to sickly children, and restoring to health and usefulness the men who went under with tuberculosis while overseas, is the basis of the appeal that is being made to London citizens this week in the "Big Heart Campaign." The gift of London that is being made this week will enable men who have gone under with disease to have a chance for their lives, and will restore to the country men who will be needed in the days to come. Above all it will help to meet our responsibility for those men afflicted with tuberculosis who are still in England, and who cannot come to Canada until there is provision made for them in the sanatoria already existing. The cause, therefore, that is before London this week is one truly patriotic, and will mean the saving for the Dominion of scores of useful lives. It is worth a sacrifice to have a part in a work as noble as this.

WOUNDED IN WAR HOSPITAL WARMLY PRAISE LONDON LADY

Mrs. (Major) McLean Supplies Good Things To Eat, and Keeps Home Town Papers for Canadians Convalescing.

A letter which carried a note of sincere thanks to Mrs. McLean, wife of Major McLean, formerly second in command of the 12th Battalion, from a wounded soldier in the Canadian Military Hospital, Sandgate, Kent, England, had three trips across the ocean before reaching the city. It was sent to the editor of the London Times or News, and the letter was returned to the editor of the London Times, London, Eng., to set the letter right, for when it reached that office it was opened and re-addressed to the Advertiser.

The message bears grateful testimony to the kindness and untiring activities of Mrs. McLean, and this is not the first time such letters have been received by the Advertiser. The Editor—"Allow me a small space in your valued paper so that I may convey to the public the good news of the great and excellent work that is being carried on by Mrs. McLean, a former soldier's wife, who has come over to England to assist in the work of the Canadian Red Cross."

I have been in the above hospital for some considerable time, and am in a position to give you a true and correct outline of the work.

She is a daily visitor, and how glad

we all are to see her smiling countenance, and she never comes but what she brings something good to eat, not forgetting, of course, cigarettes.

A Good Angel of the Hospital.

All wounded and sick men from France are lucky if Mrs. McLean gets to know them; they are sure to be supplied with any necessary hospital kit, they require including razor, tooth brushes, sweater coats, shirts, socks, etc.

We are also furnished with Canadian papers and magazines. Mrs. McLean keeps a list of a ledger with all our names in it, and the town of district we come from, and contrives to get our own paper for us, which helps greatly to pass the time.

Last, but by no means not least, Mrs. McLean makes a party of soldiers to a real picture show, and after that provides us with a nice tea, and mind this all comes out of her own pocket.

The "Tommys" are all very grateful to Mrs. McLean. The hospital makes us happy, and that she does with a great degree of success.

I have been in the above hospital for some considerable time, and am in a position to give you a true and correct outline of the work.

She is a daily visitor, and how glad

we all are to see her smiling countenance, and she never comes but what she brings something good to eat, not forgetting, of course, cigarettes.

A Good Angel of the Hospital.

All wounded and sick men from France are lucky if Mrs. McLean gets to know them; they are sure to be supplied with any necessary hospital kit, they require including razor, tooth brushes, sweater coats, shirts, socks, etc.

We are also furnished with Canadian papers and magazines. Mrs. McLean keeps a list of a ledger with all our names in it, and the town of district we come from, and contrives to get our own paper for us, which helps greatly to pass the time.

Last, but by no means not least, Mrs. McLean makes a party of soldiers to a real picture show, and after that provides us with a nice tea, and mind this all comes out of her own pocket.

The "Tommys" are all very grateful to Mrs. McLean. The hospital makes us happy, and that she does with a great degree of success.

I have been in the above hospital for some considerable time, and am in a position to give you a true and correct outline of the work.

She is a daily visitor, and how glad

we all are to see her smiling countenance, and she never comes but what she brings something good to eat, not forgetting, of course, cigarettes.

A Good Angel of the Hospital.

All wounded and sick men from France are lucky if Mrs. McLean gets to know them; they are sure to be supplied with any necessary hospital kit, they require including razor, tooth brushes, sweater coats, shirts, socks, etc.

We are also furnished with Canadian papers and magazines. Mrs. McLean keeps a list of a ledger with all our names in it, and the town of district we come from, and contrives to get our own paper for us, which helps greatly to pass the time.

Last, but by no means not least, Mrs. McLean makes a party of soldiers to a real picture show, and after that provides us with a nice tea, and mind this all comes out of her own pocket.

The "Tommys" are all very grateful to Mrs. McLean. The hospital makes us happy, and that she does with a great degree of success.

I have been in the above hospital for some considerable time, and am in a position to give you a true and correct outline of the work.

She is a daily visitor, and how glad

we all are to see her smiling countenance, and she never comes but what she brings something good to eat, not forgetting, of course, cigarettes.

A Good Angel of the Hospital.

All wounded and sick men from France are lucky if Mrs. McLean gets to know them; they are sure to be supplied with any necessary hospital kit, they require including razor, tooth brushes, sweater coats, shirts, socks, etc.

ENGLISH CHILDREN PLACE FLOWERS ON CANADIAN GRAVES

To Make Relatives Feel That
Dear Ones Not Forgotten.

PTE. GRAY AMONG THEM

Uncle of Late Ronald Gray Is
Among Hundred in Shorncliffe Cemetery.

Mrs. Annie Gray, 353 Oxford street, widow of Pte. David Gray, who died of wounds last November after serving for many months in the front line, has just received a letter from Pte. James W. Dawson, a soldier who left with No. 10 Stationary Hospital, in which the latter includes a clipping from the London Express telling of the cemetery in which Pte. Gray was buried. Pte. Gray was a brother of James Gray, and an uncle of the late Lieut. Ronald Gray.

Place Flowers on Graves.

"Hundreds of school children of Folkestone, Hythe and Sandgate will be seen at 5.30 p.m. on Wednesday, June 13, in the morning, and at Shorncliffe Camp, and will place flowers on the graves of about one hundred Canadian soldiers. Many public bodies are sending wreaths, besides private individuals."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"Each of these graves has a white wooden cross, on which the name, rank and unit of the soldier are inscribed. Mrs. Gray greatly appreciated the kindness of the English people in showing such regard for the pathos of this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

SMALLEST JERSEY PLACE FLOWERS ON CANADIAN GRAVES

To Make Relatives Feel That
Dear Ones Not Forgotten.

PTE. GRAY AMONG THEM

Uncle of Late Ronald Gray Is
Among Hundred in Shorn-
cliffe Cemetery.

Mrs. Annie Gray, 353 Oxford street, widow of Pte. David Gray, who died of wounds last November after serving for many months in the front line, has just received a letter from Pte. James W. Dawson, a soldier who left with No. 10 Stationary Hospital, in which the latter includes a clipping from the London Express telling of the cemetery in which Pte. Gray was buried. Pte. Gray was a brother of James Gray, and an uncle of the late Lieut. Ronald Gray.

Place Flowers on Graves.

"Hundreds of school children of Folkestone, Hythe and Sandgate will be seen at 5.30 p.m. on Wednesday, June 13, in the morning, and at Shorncliffe Camp, and will place flowers on the graves of about one hundred Canadian soldiers. Many public bodies are sending wreaths, besides private individuals."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"Each of these graves has a white wooden cross, on which the name, rank and unit of the soldier are inscribed. Mrs. Gray greatly appreciated the kindness of the English people in showing such regard for the pathos of this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

THE WEATHER. FAIR AND COOLER.

To Make Relatives Feel That
Dear Ones Not Forgotten.

PTE. GRAY AMONG THEM

Uncle of Late Ronald Gray Is
Among Hundred in Shorn-
cliffe Cemetery.

Mrs. Annie Gray, 353 Oxford street, widow of Pte. David Gray, who died of wounds last November after serving for many months in the front line, has just received a letter from Pte. James W. Dawson, a soldier who left with No. 10 Stationary Hospital, in which the latter includes a clipping from the London Express telling of the cemetery in which Pte. Gray was buried. Pte. Gray was a brother of James Gray, and an uncle of the late Lieut. Ronald Gray.

Place Flowers on Graves.

"Hundreds of school children of Folkestone, Hythe and Sandgate will be seen at 5.30 p.m. on Wednesday, June 13, in the morning, and at Shorncliffe Camp, and will place flowers on the graves of about one hundred Canadian soldiers. Many public bodies are sending wreaths, besides private individuals."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"Each of these graves has a white wooden cross, on which the name, rank and unit of the soldier are inscribed. Mrs. Gray greatly appreciated the kindness of the English people in showing such regard for the pathos of this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."

"The thoughts that are uppermost in the minds of the promoters are that the relatives of the men who are buried far away from home should feel that their sons are not forgotten, and that although they themselves cannot perform this act of devotion, others are doing it in their name."