BOYD-GORDON REPLIES.

Editor World: The editor of the weekly financial review, The Financial Post, published in Toronto, has in the last issue printed, in the columns intended for editorials, am article entitled "The Prospects of Gow Ganda."

The writer at the outset takes advantage of the dodge of escaping personal liability by laying the onus of his remarks at the door of "an able mining engineer of undoubted authority," who is unknown and remains anonymous. Who is he? Is he the colonel himself, or his alde-de-camp?

He is credited with saying in one breath that "Cobalt mines have probably reached the limit of their production" and in the next that he "has naturally confidence in Cobalt." On what does he base his predictions and why the confidence?

"His reports on the James and Gow Ganda districts after recurrent and the confidence?"

"His reports on the James and Gow Ganda districts after recurrent and the confidence of the average tailor shops—that they must do so in order to get right prices. The trade for spring and summer is over practically the first week in July. The early selling leaves trading and manufacturing interests that have been working assiduously to retain or even increase the high measure of protection they already enjoy. They fear not so much the immediate ieduction as the prospect that the process once begun will be continued, and that more rapidly and in much freater degree.

Much uncertainty exists over the effect of the clauses regulating the imposition of the maximum tariff. As position of the maximum tariff. As they are now phrased, they appear to act automatically wherever a foreign in fertile imagination.

That the writer of the article does not know what he is attempting to write about is patent to anyone who is posted. And I am posted. He says: "Without exception development has indicated that the surface values do not hold." The reverse has been proven in all the Gow Ganda mines where sinking has been done.

He says the most promising mine in Gow Ganda is the Blackburn—WHICH IS LOCATED TEN MILES AWAY, AT MILLER LAKE. He also has an idea of what was paid for the various properties, which was also culled from his fertile imagination.
