

HIS REPORT will no doubt be read by many persons who are not contributors to the funds of the Society.

To such we would say that the usefulness of the Society would be greatly increased if its means were larger, and the Treasurer would welcome contributions from them. To this end, we would direct attention to what is said, under the head of "Finances," on page 19.

We would draw the attention of those readers who have kind hearts and large means, to what is said, under the head of "Need of a Permanent Building," on page 18.

Will our friends strive to interest their friends in the work of the Society, and ask them to read over a copy of the Report carefully.

J. K. MACDONALD,
PRESIDENT.

J. STUART COLEMAN,
SECRETARY.
