HOLLAND'S SUGAR SURPLUS.

Hundred Thousand Tons Will Be Avail-able for Export Shortly.

Recent reports of a probable scarcity of sugar in Holland are now dispelled by official statements that not only will the 1917 production be ample for domestic needs but will leave a surplus for export.

The reports about scarcity, says the American consul at Amsterdam, were due to the fact that sugar beets were being fed to cattle owing to the lack of fodder; but it is now authoritatively announced that a considerable part of the 1917 crop may be fed to cattle, still leaving an abundance for the production of sufficient sugar. This is in spite of the fact that the sugar beet area in Holland was 20 per cent less in 1917 than in average recent preceding years, the excellent crop offsetting that shortage.

The annual production of beet sugar in Holland in recent years was between 280,000 and 300,000 tons, of which one-half sufficed for local requirements. The 1917 production is not yet stated, but apparently it was fairly normal.

The government controls the sugar supply and has fixed a price which brings sugar to the consumer for 12 1/2 American cents a pound, according to kind. This is only about three cents above half the price.

Freight and property and retail price of sugar in Holland consists of the excise tax. However, it is stated that the government loses about a cent a pound on the price it has fixed; that is to say, sugar cannot now be produced and marketed at the government price with any profit, and therefore the government pays the dealers a fair compensation. This it also does in respect to various other articles of which it has fixed the maximum price.
