TUG BOAT WORK HAS CHANGED MUCH: A CHAT WITH A HARBOR VETERAN

Captain Gallagher Recalls a Record Tow Made Through Falls—Search For Ernest

Earle's Body Abandoned

"The towing we have to do these days is very much different from what we did when I first started in the business said Captain Patrick Gallagher in speaking to a Times reporter. In those days we used to have to tow the wooden vessels which kept going in and out of the harbor continually, and as nearly all the saw mills were here at Indiantown then, we used to be called upon to tow these vessels back and forth through the falls, but things have changed.

"At the time I speak of when we used to tow the wooden vessels, I remember one day, it is just about twenty years ago, when I was in charge of the old "Captain" we towed nine schooners down through the falls in one tow. The vessels were all loaded and we placed them two on one side of the tug and one on the other and behind us came the others, two of them on our hawsers, and the others behind them again. Think what a fine sight we must have made," said Captain Gallagher, "with sails all set, too. People crossing the bridge at the time all stopped to look at us.

Asked if it was a usual thing in those days to tow so many vessels at once, he said "it was never done before and never has been since and of course now it never will be again." The captain prospective will be again. The captain prosp
