

WHY SHOULD NOT OLD PEOPLE RETAIN THEIR YOUTHFUL VIGOR

No Reason Why Men and Women of Sixty, Seventy and Eighty Should Not Be Well—The Secret of Happy Old Age

"Fruit-a-tives", the Famous Medicine Made of Fresh Fruit Juices, Again Proves Its Great Value in Curing Kidney Trouble.

Old age pays the cost of living. Few men and women of fifty, sixty and seventy are free of Kidney Trouble. Hard work, mental strain and general debility, tell in the long run. And many men and women show they have Kidney Trouble by suffering with pain in the back, headaches, rheumatism, sciatica, bladder disease.

To such people "Fruit-a-tives" has proved one of the wonders of the age—the most remarkable discovery of the century in modern medical science. This fruit medicine has performed hundreds of cures, where the sufferer had been told that the case was incurable.

Take, for instance, Mr. Geo. W. Barkley, a prosperous farmer and one of the leading citizens of Dundas County, Ontario.

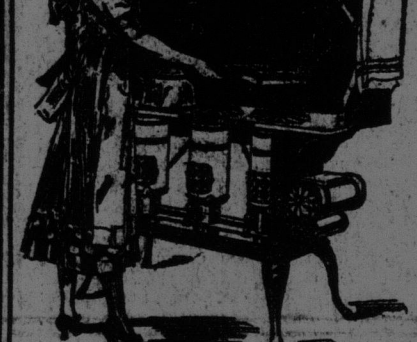

At seventy-six, he is the picture of health—with the vigorous actions and the slightly step of a man of fifty.

Yet for twenty years, he suffered with Kidney Trouble. He took "Fruit-a-tives" and it cured him.

"For over twenty years I have been troubled with Kidney Disease, and the doctors told me they could do no good, and said I would be a sufferer all the rest of my life. Nearly a year ago, I tried "Fruit-a-tives". I have been using them all the time since and am glad to say that I am cured. I give "Fruit-a-tives" the credit of doing what the doctors said was impossible."

GEO. W. BARKLEY.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit, and is the only one that acts directly on the kidneys. It cures. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c. At dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

"I WAS STANDING THERE, SIR"

An incident at Lord Mervyn's "Titanic" investigation in Old London. Quartermaster Robert Hichens, who was at the wheel of the Titanic when the crash came, pointing out on the gigantic models of the Titanic where he was located when the accident happened. Hichens' picture is of particular interest to Canadians, as he was the man whom Major Peuchen of Toronto said was incapable of taking proper care of the lifeboat in which he was in charge, with Peuchen and many ladies as passengers. Hichens denied Peuchen's assertion in toto. Giving evidence at the London enquiry, he said he received the order "hard-a-starboard," and the vessel had swung about two points when she struck the iceberg.

UTILIZE THE SCHOOL GROUNDS

Some Opinions Brought Out in Campaign Waged by Halifax Newspaper

(Amherst News)

The Halifax Evening Mail is waging an active campaign to have the public schools and the playgrounds connected therewith used for social services.

The Mail adopts the sensible view that the home and school should be linked together and that their cooperation would facilitate education, create a deeper sympathy between teachers, scholars and parents and that scholars even after leaving school would maintain an interest in them if the school grounds and buildings were opened for their use.

It has been definitely settled that the body of the man who was killed by being run over by a freight train near Parrish crossing some time ago, was that of John Hughes of Amherst. There was a story yesterday that Hughes' uncle had denied that it was his body that was found, as he had stayed at his home on the West Main street on Thursday night last. Investigation of this report has proved that it was true.

MAKES TINY WATCH INSIDE OF A PEARL

ing broken through a door they entered the villa. Madame Herbutte de la Butte was in her bedroom, reading a newspaper before she went off to sleep. Leard, her visitor of the previous day, sprang forward, seized her by the throat, and put a hand on her mouth to prevent her from screaming, while one of his companions kept watch and the other ransacked drawers, wardrobe and cupboards.

But the plucky old lady was not inclined to surrender. She struggled bravely, pulled a knife out of her pocket, and soon managed to snatch a revolver out of a drawer. Aiming the weapon at her assailants, she contrived to beat a retreat into the garden, and when they overtook her and threw her on the ground she fired off her revolver and called for help.

The three young miscreants, thus foiled and fearing that neighbors might come to the rescue of their victim, ran off into the fields, where they were soon arrested. No attempt was made by them after their capture to deny their guilt, and as they expressed regret, and Madame Herbutte de la Butte was disposed to be forgiving, their counsel had an easy task in melting the phenomenally tender hearts of the jury.

The jury, thinking that two years' imprisonment, or a year in a reformatory until they had attained their majority, would be too severe a penalty for the interesting trio, actually sent for the judge and asked him to agree to give them the benefit of the First Offenders' Act, or to inflict a mild reprimand. As the poor fellows had already passed four months in custody, the judge explained that he could conclude no such bargain. A verdict of not guilty was accordingly returned, and the three young men were immediately set free.

There is little doubt that the old lady would have been murdered outright if she had not been so brave.

French African Railway

From time to time during the last half-century the imagination of French empire-builders has been stirred by the ambitious scheme for a railway that, starting from Algeria, shall strike boldly across the desert to the fertile regions of the Niger, and the supporters and opponents of the "Trans-Saharan" have split much ink in vain controversy upon the subject. Sooner or later this dream will be accomplished, and its realization by a more westerly route is the more likely now that France has obtained control over Morocco, to the south of which the line from Oren is being steadily pushed forward.

But this scheme, which is still far from being carried to completion, is simplicity itself compared with the latest proposal which has been put forward by a senator and ex-minister in the columns of a prominent Paris newspaper. He suggests nothing less than the construction of a Trans-African railway from Tangier to the Indian Ocean, the motive power to be electrically derived from water-power in the neighborhood of Lake Tchad.

The line, as vaguely sketched out by this ultra-imperialist, would pass by way of Larache, Fez, Fiquig, the Oasis of Touat, and Agades to Lake Tchad, and thence along the course of the Shari river, eventually reaching the Indian Ocean at a place on the Equator which he calls Juba, but which is more probably intended for Kinyanga, just within the northern boundary of British East Africa. This gargantuan enterprise, which dictates all help from the Uganda Railway and the fine port of Mombasa, as well as many obvious difficulties, would be linked with Spain and England by train ferries, the railways between the Spanish port of Tarifa and London being adapted to electric traction. This, he says, would bring the Indian Ocean within five days' travelling from London, deprive the Suez Canal of its traffic, shorten the route to India, and the East, and earn huge profits by tapping the resources of the whole of Central Africa.

In short, as France would need about three-quarters of the line, she would "rule the world," by holding the road to the open sea, and speaking generally, claims in place in the equatorial sun pretty effectively. Few people will be likely to pay serious attention to this extraordinary dream, particularly in view of the present happenings in Morocco, Tripoli, and the Mediterranean, and the possibility of the European powers, interested in North Africa having their hands full for some time to come. It is, however, interesting, as showing that the acquisition of a huge African empire by France has put serious notions into the minds of Frenchmen who have learned to think imperially. The dream is magnificent, but it is not likely to be anything more than a dream.

JAMES BURNS VICTIM OF SHOOTING ACCIDENT

James Burns, colored, of Duke street, was accidentally shot in the stomach yesterday afternoon by James A. Marsh, another colored man, while the two were on a fishing trip to Silver Falls. Burns is in a precarious condition in the hospital and Marsh is locked up. Marsh took a revolver with him on the trip, and says that while doing some target practice the weapon was accidentally discharged and Burns was shot.

After being shot Burns walked all the way into the city, but on reaching home he collapsed. He was hurried to the hospital and operated on. The bullet was located. Marsh will be held pending the outcome of the inquiry.
