

Baker's Cocoa and Chocolate

ARE THE STANDARDS OF THE WORLD

53 Highest Awards in Europe and America

THE NEW MILL AT 1000 ALBERT STREET, MONTREAL

For over 131 years these well-known preparations have been made only at the company's mills (the largest in the world) at Dorchester, Mass., U. S. A. In order to keep pace with the rapidly increasing demand for its goods in the Dominion of Canada and the British Provinces, a large mill has been put in operation in Montreal.

With the finest possible equipment of modern machinery, with the accumulated experience of more than a century and a quarter in the selection and blending of cocoa beans and by the employment of a perfect mechanical process of manufacture, consumers and dealers are assured that the uniformity of quality and delicacy of flavor which have made these goods the standards of the world will be maintained.

To facilitate the distribution of goods, selling offices are located at Montreal, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

We guarantee the absolute purity of these goods under the pure food laws of Canada

WALTER BAKER & CO. LIMITED
DORCHESTER, MASS. MONTREAL, CANADA

SHIPPING

ALMANAC FOR ST. JOHN, JUNE 28
Sun Rise.....4:45 Sun Set.....8:11
High Tide.....12:35 Low Tide.....7:17
The moon set at Atlantic standard.

PORT OF ST. JOHN,
Arrived Yesterday.
Schr Brooklyn (Am), 455, Kerrigan,
New York, master, bal.
Sailed Yesterday.
S S Johannes Russ, 1112 (Ger), Sime,
New York, master, bal.
Earl Grey, Halifax, Mount Temple, London.
Two Sisters, Sabane, River Hebert.

CANADIAN PORTS.
Quebec, June 27—Arr, government stmr
Earl Grey, Halifax; Mount Temple, London.
Montreal, June 26—Arr, stmr Corsica,
Liverpool; Albania, Southampton.

LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES
They Are Closely Observing Public Health Conditions

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that the reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because of kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of them are not even aware of the fact.

He states that among the few who experience and report from their kidneys who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has probably been more successful in relieving and curing these diseases than any remedy known. The mill and health influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the test of its remarkable record of cures.

We find that Swamp-Root is strictly an herbal compound and we would advise our readers who feel in need of such a remedy to give it a trial. It is on sale at all drug stores in Canada in bottles of two sizes—75c. and $1.25.

However, if you wish first to test its wonderful merits, send to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle, absolutely free. When writing be sure and mention the St. John Evening Times.

BRITISH PORTS.

Liverpool, June 27—Arr, stmr Louisiana, New York; Hardanger, St John; Terschelling, Gaspe (Que).
Pastet, June 26—Pangloss, stmr Duart, O'Sullivan, Chatham (N B), for Manchester.

Quebec, June 26—Steamed 24th, stmr Athena, McNeill, Montreal.
Sydney, NSW, June 28—Arr, stmr Asco, Booth, St John (N B), via Table Bay, etc.

FOREIGN PORTS.
New York, June 27—Arr, stmr Kron Prinz Wilhelm, Bremen, Southampton and Cherbourg.
Vineyard Haven, Mass, June 27—Sld, stmr Moana, St John for New York.

Eastport, Me, June 26—Sld, stmr Harold B Cousins, Newcastle (N B).
Bridgeport, Ct, June 26—Arr, stmr Harry Miller, St John; Kennecott, Calais (Me); Harry Prescott, Wilmington (N C).

Vineyard Haven, June 26—Arr, stmr Winnie Lawry, Sackville (N B), for New York; Ethyl B Sumner, Apple River (N S), for New York.

Havana, June 26—Arr, S S Tanagra, Dalton, from St John.
Baltimore, June 27—Sld, S S Sellasia, Chandler, for Port Ligon.

Rio Janeiro, June 27—In port, S S Ilmora, Bennett, for Philadelphia or Baltimore.

Morning News Over The Wires
The Port Hood, C. B., coal mine is being flooded by the ocean and will be abandoned.

Dr. Louis H. Morse, of Digby, died yesterday. He was forty-three years of age and was a son of the late Harding Morse of Annapolis.

Ottawa, June 27—(Special)—Hon. Thomas Ashburnham is gazetted major of the 28th New Brunswick Dragoons.

Montreal, June 27—W. C. Mitchell, who for several years has been general superintendent of the Dominion Steel Company of Sydney, has accepted the general superintendency of the Algoma Steel Company, one of the subsidiary companies of the Superior Corporation, of which Thomas J. Drummond is president.

Mr. Mitchell leaves for Saint Ste Marie on Monday next.

Montreal, June 27—Lightning tonight struck the church of St. Jean Baptiste on Rue Saint-Jacques and completely destroyed the splendid edifice, with a loss of about $200,000.

Montreal, June 27—Father Lord, a Jesuit

THE EVANS FORTUNE

Boston, June 27—It was announced to Judge Morton, of the supreme court, today that the commissioners had completed the depositions asked for by Mrs. Maria A. Evans, widow of Robert D. Evans, and an order was made that they be recorded in the registry of deeds within thirty days.

The purpose of Mrs. Evans was to perpetuate testimony which after her death will determine who will be entitled to one-half of the estate of her husband.

Monarchs Have Sought It in Vain
Granted to the late Nasr-Eddin, the murdered Shah of Persia, and bestowed only two years ago upon the Mikado, it was persistently refused by Queen Victoria and King Edward to that of Abdul Hamid of Turkey—not, as alleged, because of his Moslem creed, but on account of his character.

The nephew and heir apparent of the present Padiashah, who has been representing his uncle at King George's coronation in London, seems to have been cruelly disappointed at his failure to receive the garter, and to have at first declined to accept the Grand Cross of the Victorian Order, taking it only after some delay, and after getting peremptory commands from the Sultan at Constantinople to do so.

There is no doubt that he has returned to Stambul thoroughly embittered against Great Britain, by what he considers to be the slight placed upon him in this affair, and that when he succeeds to the throne at Constantinople, he will display an ill-will towards Great Britain that will be very judicious to his interests in Turkey.

But it would have been obviously impossible to give him the garter without bestowing it upon his uncle the Sultan, who shares with the King of Bulgaria, the King of Servia, and the King of Saxony, the questionable distinction of being the only monarch of Europe who does not belong to the Order of the Garter; for King George's intention to send before the end of the year a special embassy to Brussels, to convey to him England's oldest, most illustrious, and most historic order of knighthood.

In Days of Old
Inasmuch as pictures of the recent investiture of the young Prince of Wales with the Order of the Garter at Windsor Castle, have been widely published in country, it may be worth while saying a few words about the elderly warriors, in odd, old-fashioned uniforms, who figured so conspicuously in the proceedings. Clad in scarlet tail-coats, of the kind that were worn by English generals seventy years ago, with garter-blue velvet facings, and gold epaulettes, ornamented by the red cross of St. George on a silver ground, a cocked hat, adorned with a tall straight plume of red and white feathers, and trousers with a broad red stripe, a cross-shaped sword like that of the garter knights, suspended from a white sword-belt worn as the breast, they presented a very picturesque appearance. They are the eighteen so-called military knights of Windsor.

At the time of the foundation of the Order of the Garter by Edward III, after his victory of Crecy over Philip VI of France, he decided that each of the members of the Order of the Garter should maintain his own charge of those poor unfortunate knights who had expended their substance and been disabled by wounds in his French wars and that they should be lodged at royal expense within the precincts of Windsor Castle, and in the immediate neighborhood of the Chapel of St. George, the patron saint of England.

In the beginning these knights, twenty-six in number, corresponding with the original establishment of the members of the Order of the Garter, were known as the Aims Knights and also as the Poor Knights of Windsor. In olden times they were habited in a soutane or cassock of garter-blue, with which they wore a sword, the left breast of this cassock being adorned with the red cross of St. George within a star of silver.

After 1815, the veterans of the Peninsula war, and of the battle of Waterloo, appointed to the so-called Foundation of St. George's of Windsor, and the members of the order, and this was accorded by George IV, as Regent; William IV afterwards ordering, instead, the special military uniform which they now wear and at the same time transforming their designation from "the Poor Knights" to that of "the Military Knights of Windsor."

Some Perquisites
They occupy Tudor houses, built for their accommodation by Queen Mary, are eighteen in number, and are selected, as they have been for the past 500 years, from officers who have held commissions in the regular army and who, in accordance with the old statute "have served in our wars." They receive their lodgings free, also a number of perquisites and privileges, besides a special allowance, which added to their pension, enables them to live in a good deal of comfort. All that is asked of them in return, is to attend, in uniform, morning and evening service in St. George's Chapel, and to do duty in the capacity of gentlemen-at-arms, on the occasion of state functions held at Windsor.

In the reign of King George III, a number of old naval officers were added, and the entire foundation was officially known

The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

As a contribution for the unusual-occupations-for-women column, a reader has sent in the following suggestive little story of her experience. She had been ill for two or three days with bronchitis, not ill enough to afford a trained nurse, but decidedly sick enough to need to go to bed and stay there.

Her husband had been trying to do the housework, take care of her and attend to his business with the usual nerve-racking results for both patient and nurse.

Someone told him of a Miss Blank, saying: "Telephone Miss Blank to go to your house—she is a mighty nice girl. She isn't a servant, and, of course, you can't expect her to do the heavy work, but she fills in at times like these and is just the one to help you. She is such a good, sensible, sympathetic, wholesome girl."

"Miss Blank was promptly telephoned for and promptly came. She first asked me to please go right to bed and sleep. Quietly and quickly, she returned to me with the hot-water bag, then she sponged my face with warm water and alcohol. Then she brushed my hair ever so gently and after making me comfortable with a handkerchief, a drink and adjusting the shade, she tackled the rest of the house.

"In a little while she advised me that we needed eggs and coffee and other food. (Why is it everything runs out when you are ill?), so she went out and purchased supplies and placed on the table the most delectable lunch, tea, and delicious poached eggs.

At three o'clock she came to me dressed and ready to leave. Even though I longed to have her come the following day, I must think of the financial end of it, as my husband receives only a small salary. So I told her how grateful I was, told her I did so much want her to come again, but stated frankly that we had to be careful of the general fund.

"She smiled and said: 'Well, my prices vary—depend not only on the length of time and the amount of work necessary to be done, but on the circumstances of these I serve.' You know, I do all sorts of things. For instance, this evening at seven o'clock I visit a Mrs. Earle's apartment while she is at the theatre to watch over her two children. They will be asleep, and in all probability will remain so until her return, but should there be a fire or should one of them be taken ill, Mrs. Earle knows I would not lose my head, whereas a servant—well, Mrs. Earle says she believes the servants leave soon after she does. Some of them, it is true, only go out on the stoop, but they could not possibly hear the crying of a sick child.

"Now, for today, would you consider a dollar and carfare too much? Need I add that I begged her to return the following day?

"When my husband came home he said at once: 'You look fifty per cent. better.' On going into the kitchen to prepare something to eat, he returned practically on the run. 'Well, say, she's a brick.' Then he explained that the contrast between his return that night and the night before was so vivid that he had to tell me about it before he did a thing. The night before—newspapers hither and yon; table and sink full of dirty dishes and nothing to eat.

"Compared with prepared broth for the invalid in a double boiler with a little note beside it telling just what to do, she had also cooked and peeled and placed in another double boiler, ready to reheat; the tomatoes were peeled and placed on the lettuce, and the chops on the ice.

"She came to me for four consecutive days, and believe me, that four dollars and forty cents brought me more comfort, contentment and happiness than I ever got out of a similar sum in all my life.

"As an ending I might say that I think this is a splendid idea for any girl to carry out. We need thousands like this."

May I add that the position of "sitter" should surely be attractive, not only to the girl who wants a profession that is not overcrowded, but to the girl who would like to feel that she is combining social service with bread winning?

La MARQUISE de FONTENOY

The Order of the Garter and Some Rulers Who Have Sought it in Vain—Tories Withheld it From Argyll and Fife

(Copyright, 1911, by the Brentwood Company.)

The bestowal of the Order of the Garter upon the Duke of Argyll and Fife, on the occasion of the coronation of King George serves to show once again how much more accommodating and friendly the Liberals are to the sovereign, than the Conservatives. And in spite of the fact that Edward VII. was, in reality, also his successor, with Tory leanings, it is a fact that they have invariably met with much less opposition to their wishes from the Radicals than from the Conservatives.

Thus, when King Edward wished on the occasion of his coronation in 1902, to bestow the Order of the Garter upon his son-in-law, the Duke of Fife, and upon his brother-in-law, the Duke of Argyll, Lord Salisbury objected on the pretext that the sovereign had the power to confer the garter upon a British noble, save on the nomination and with the consent of the premier for the time being; and, moreover, that, while the number of English and foreign royalties, who are accounted as extra knights, is restricted, the number of non-royal British members of the order is fixed by statute.

Prime Minister Asquith, however, more amiable than the late Lord Salisbury towards the crown, intimated to King George that he saw no obstacle in the way of the appointment of the Duke of Argyll and of Fife to the Order of the Garter, as extra knights, in view of the fact that he regarded them as belonging by marriage to the royal family, and they have thus become possessed of a distinction which they would not have otherwise enjoyed.

An order which a British subject values more highly than any title in the peerage, an order which many European sovereigns have asked for without success.

Monarchs Have Sought it in Vain
Granted to the late Nasr-Eddin, the murdered Shah of Persia, and bestowed only two years ago upon the Mikado, it was persistently refused by Queen Victoria and King Edward to that of Abdul Hamid of Turkey—not, as alleged, because of his Moslem creed, but on account of his character.

The nephew and heir apparent of the present Padiashah, who has been representing his uncle at King George's coronation in London, seems to have been cruelly disappointed at his failure to receive the garter, and to have at first declined to accept the Grand Cross of the Victorian Order, taking it only after some delay, and after getting peremptory commands from the Sultan at Constantinople to do so.

There is no doubt that he has returned to Stambul thoroughly embittered against Great Britain, by what he considers to be the slight placed upon him in this affair, and that when he succeeds to the throne at Constantinople, he will display an ill-will towards Great Britain that will be very judicious to his interests in Turkey.

But it would have been obviously impossible to give him the garter without bestowing it upon his uncle the Sultan, who shares with the King of Bulgaria, the King of Servia, and the King of Saxony, the questionable distinction of being the only monarch of Europe who does not belong to the Order of the Garter; for King George's intention to send before the end of the year a special embassy to Brussels, to convey to him England's oldest, most illustrious, and most historic order of knighthood.

In Days of Old
Inasmuch as pictures of the recent investiture of the young Prince of Wales with the Order of the Garter at Windsor Castle, have been widely published in country, it may be worth while saying a few words about the elderly warriors, in odd, old-fashioned uniforms, who figured so conspicuously in the proceedings. Clad in scarlet tail-coats, of the kind that were worn by English generals seventy years ago, with garter-blue velvet facings, and gold epaulettes, ornamented by the red cross of St. George on a silver ground, a cocked hat, adorned with a tall straight plume of red and white feathers, and trousers with a broad red stripe, a cross-shaped sword like that of the garter knights, suspended from a white sword-belt worn as the breast, they presented a very picturesque appearance. They are the eighteen so-called military knights of Windsor.

At the time of the foundation of the Order of the Garter by Edward III, after his victory of Crecy over Philip VI of France, he decided that each of the members of the Order of the Garter should maintain his own charge of those poor unfortunate knights who had expended their substance and been disabled by wounds in his French wars and that they should be lodged at royal expense within the precincts of Windsor Castle, and in the immediate neighborhood of the Chapel of St. George, the patron saint of England.

In the beginning these knights, twenty-six in number, corresponding with the original establishment of the members of the Order of the Garter, were known as the Aims Knights and also as the Poor Knights of Windsor. In olden times they were habited in a soutane or cassock of garter-blue, with which they wore a sword, the left breast of this cassock being adorned with the red cross of St. George within a star of silver.

After 1815, the veterans of the Peninsula war, and of the battle of Waterloo, appointed to the so-called Foundation of St. George's of Windsor, and the members of the order, and this was accorded by George IV, as Regent; William IV afterwards ordering, instead, the special military uniform which they now wear and at the same time transforming their designation from "the Poor Knights" to that of "the Military Knights of Windsor."

Some Perquisites
They occupy Tudor houses, built for their accommodation by Queen Mary, are eighteen in number, and are selected, as they have been for the past 500 years, from officers who have held commissions in the regular army and who, in accordance with the old statute "have served in our wars." They receive their lodgings free, also a number of perquisites and privileges, besides a special allowance, which added to their pension, enables them to live in a good deal of comfort. All that is asked of them in return, is to attend, in uniform, morning and evening service in St. George's Chapel, and to do duty in the capacity of gentlemen-at-arms, on the occasion of state functions held at Windsor.

In the reign of King George III, a number of old naval officers were added, and the entire foundation was officially known as the Military and Naval Poor Knights of Windsor. But the naval knights were relegated out of existence during the last century, and the funds for their support were transferred to the Greenwich Hospital pension list.

King Edward Dealt With Abuses
At one time a good many abuses had crept into the foundation; so much so, that Edward VII. thought of their abolition. He found that the residences which the Knights of Windsor occupied within the castle precincts, were in part of time not merely lent, but sometimes leased, in return for cash, to persons who it was in no sense of the word desirable to have as part and parcel of the Windsor Castle establishment; all the more, as to be a resident of Windsor, entitles a considerable amount of credit and prestige.

But when it was pointed out to him that parliamentary legislation would be necessary for the purpose of abolishing the knights, and that he would be bitterly criticised for turning aside a number of ancient veterans, depriving them of the lodgings and allowances which they had every reason to believe had been granted them for life, he made up his mind to continue their existence, at the same time instituting a number of rules by which the abuses to which he took objection, have been effectively prevented.

Although officially styled the "Knights" of Windsor, they are not entitled to the prefix to their names which falls to the share of those who receive the honor of Knighthood, either by patent, or else by a tap on the shoulder with the sword of the sovereign, or by that of his viceroy of Ireland or of India.

MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.
Children's Pretty Summer Dresses

Modern methods and machinery have taken the mother's place of fashioning her little one's garments herself. To buy materials now-a-days and spend hours making them up is such an expenditure along side that of buying them ready-made that no one wishes to make it. It has been our pride all along to keep the prettiest collection of little dresses in the city. We claim that distinction right now. We will ask you to come and give your opinion of them.

Beautiful White Lawn Dresses, handsomely trimmed with lace and embroidery, in great assortment, 48c., 55c., 65c., 78c., 85c., $1.25, $1.38.

N. J. LAHOOD
282 Brussels Street
Corner Hanover

Restores color to Gray or Faded hair—Removes dandruff and itches the scalp—Promotes a luxuriant, healthy hair growth—Stops its falling out—Is not a dye.

$1.00 and 50c. at Drug Stores or direct upon receipt of price and dealer's name. Send for sample bottle—Free. Societies Co., Newark, N.J., U.S.A.

REFUSE ALL SUBSTITUTES
For Sale and Recommended by E. OLINTON BROWN
Cor. Union and Waterloo Streets.

Hay's Hair Health

Special Glove Sale

Ladies' Long Kid Gloves, worth $2.25; for $1.50

" " " " 1.75; " 1.25

" Short " " 1.35; " 1.10

" " " " 1.00; " .75

" " " " .75; " .59

500 Ladies' and Girls' Dutch Wash Collars
Worth 25 cts.; for 15 cts.

Dock Street
WILCOX'S
Market Square